fact that some of the people frequent the park in the evening took advantage of the circumstances to create a disturbance.

Reeve Osborne, chairman of Water and Light Committee, said that it was owing to a misunderstanding between the Seymour Co., and himself, but that the would be attended to.

Coun. Simpson asked why the west face of the town clock was illuminated.

No one seemed to know the reason. Coun. Simpson, Chairman Finance Committee, stated that collector's bonds would cost $7 per 1000 and suggested bonds to the amount of $5000. In reference to the interest on the Merchant's Bank draft the Finance Committee took no action as they felt it would result from any interview.

Moved by Reeve Osborne, seconded by Coun. Graham, that the solicitor be instructed to take question of the extension of the main south on Centre street w Waterworks Co., and provide waterworks Co. refuses to make extension, then the Board of Water Commissioners be asked to inquire in the wording of the contract nowing between the Corporation and Waterworks Co. Carried.

Coun. Walters informed the reporter that he was in possession of confidential information concerning erection of the drill hall in Napanee. If the council would like to drill hall erected this year they get busy and have everything ready so that no delays would occur to laxity on the part of the town.

Moved by Councillors Simps Dickinson that a by-law be passed and submitted to the council on the amount of the collector's bond from $8000 to $5000. Carried.

"Dear Sir,—I beg to submit my application as underkeeper of the city prison. I possess the following qualifications: I am a Spaniard by birth, but a British subject by naturalization, and 36 years of age. Three years I was a turnkey in the castle of Montjuith, Spain, where the Holy Inquisition is yet in operation for the good of the country, and well acquainted with the ways of most efficient institution to subdue rebellious and incorrigible prisoners to tame them without killing or maiming. From Spain I was after employed as an overseer on the plantation, where I learned thoroughly how to handle worthless and ungovernable negroes only by the use of the whip. A PLEASANT TRIP TO PICTON SCHOOL

On Friday, May 30th, the staff of the Public Schools, of Napanee, with the Principal, Mr. Tice and the Inspector, Mr. Nesbit, went to Picton to inspect a School Art Exhibit given by the Public Schools of that town. The party started at 8:30 a.m. in Mr. Blewett's motor boat, and after a most enjoyable ride arrived at Picton wharf. Here they were met by the Staff, the Principal and the Inspector of Picton Public Schools, and conducted around the town in automobiles, placed at their service by courtesy of the owners. A visit to the Collegiate Institute, where they witnessed the inspection of the Cadet Corps by the Inspector, was one of the events of the morning. Dinner was served at the Globe Hotel, after which the party repaired to the schools where a feast of good things in art awaited them. The work of the several grades was of a very high order in its perfection, originality and intelligence of execution. As an expression of the creative power of the pupil the work in many instances showed original genius of a superior type, and the teacher who encouraged and developed this talent in the pupil is, herself, an artist in every sense of the word. From the lowest grade to the highest, beginning with the kindergarten, the art work was a climax of skill, neatness, and beauty. Where excellence was the distinguishing mark of all the work it was hard to affix the superlative to any one grade. Picton should indeed be proud of its teaching staff. Five o'clock tea was served in the Masonic Hall, where short speeches were made by Messrs. Nesbit, Tice, Morley Wilson, Benson, Wilson and the Mayor of Picton. The latter had told the Napanee teachers in the morning, in giving them the freedom of the town that they might carry away with them, whatever they wished, but in carrying away the inspiration given them by the Art Exhibit, and the memory of most delightful hospitality shown them in Picton they felt they had more than taken the genial mayor at his word. And the Napanee School Board in thus graciously giving their public school teachers this day would feel repaid if they could realize all it has meant to the teachers.

In the Millinery Department

The new hats for spring are so different from those of previous seasons that everyone is eager to see them. The display is a brilliant one, for though most of the hats are small, trimmings of vivid color are greatly in evidence. Another point to be noticed is that many of the smartest hats are very lightly trimmed. A tall mount cleverly confected of feathers, flowers, or ribbons, may be all, but it must be placed "just so," and none but the cleverest and most inspired milliners can hope to produce the chic and becoming results apparent in these new models.

SANGER'S GREAT SHOW.

Have Many Novel Features.

Out of the ordinary are many of the things to be seen with Sanger's Great European Shows, which will exhibit at Napanee, on Thursday, June 12th. To mention a few, there is "White Cloud," the famous $25,000 stallion, known as the best educated horse in the world.

Major Littlefinger and wife, smallest pair of human adults living, will hold daily receptions under the big tents.

The Aztec Marimba Band, from the wilds of Central America; the "jinx," a strange and as yet unclassified animal from Natal, are real novelties.

Sanger's great herd of gigantic performing elephants are truly wonderful.

The famous Orton family of bareback riders are notable, for this is the third generation of this remarkable family that have held the world's championship of equestrianism.

In every department of the great show you will see striking evidence that the whole world has been gleaned for real features.

Two exhibitions will be given at Napanee, on Thursday, June 12th, afternoon and night.

TORONTO, June 3.—I direct executors to publish a book giving sketch of my career, including co of correspondence with the F George W. Ross and Oliver Mowat and particularly the correspondence with reference to my removal Oliver Mowat and other Cab members, at the instance of the F George W. Ross, from office of Dept. Minister of Education in 1876, until was harshly and unjustly removed from that office by order of cou with the loss as first proposed by Hon. George W. Ross, of $2,000, afterwards compromised at $1,000, the loss sustained by me after forty-five years' active and unceas labor in the department as chie the staff."

This is an extract from a codicil attached to the more than usually interesting will of the late Dr. J George Hodgins, at one time Dept. Minister of Education, who died the 23rd of December last.

The estate is estimated at $35,900 and the testator bequeaths all property, real and personal, to wife for life, and all the income f the estate goes to her for life.

POET LAUREATE DEAD.

Alfred Austin Succeeded Lord Ten son In Post.

LONDON, June 3.—Alfred Austin, British poet laureate since 1896, yesterday, at the age of 77.

Alfred Austin, besides being a barrister, a critic, a novelist, war correspondent and a political writer. He published his first poem anonymously at the age of 18, but he had taken his degree at London University. Although he was a year he never practiced that profession. He was a newspaper correspondent in Rome for many years and he followed the operations of Franco-Prussian war in 1870-71, the headquarters of the Prussian king.

His writings were very patriotic. In one poem of recent date he called attention to the unpreparedness of the British army for war, and in another he eulogized the achievements of the British navy. In 1911 he is his autobiography.

The greater part of his poetry was published between the years 1881 and 1890, including "Savoria," "Prince Lucifer" and "English Lyrics."

The poet laureate died at his home in Swinford Old Manor, Ashford, Kent where he had been lying ill for some time.

His appointment as laureate by Premier Salisbury, was generally regarded and Austin's official odes were more amusement than enthusiasm. He was an editorial writer at The Standard, in the early days. Premier Asquith's successor, but will not hurry. His suggestion in some quarters, but virulent partisanship makes him unacceptable to many. William Watson, Britain's finest living poet, is a too erratic for an official post.

Thomas Hardy is also mentioned. But the laureateship probably will be conferred in the long run on a second-rate man.

Young Missionary From Port George, B.C., Tells How He Walked 350 Miles to Get to the Railway Which Carried Him to Conference — Dr. Herridge, Dr. Hanson, Dr. Wilson Are Among the Speakers.

TORONTO, June 3.—Remarkable enthusiasm prevailed at the evening session of the Presbyterian congress at Massey Hall last night, when "Home and Foreign Missions" were discussed. Rev. D. C. W. Gordon (Ralph Connor), Winnipeg; Rev. C. M. Wright, Port George, B.C., and Dr. Murdoch Mackenzie, North Honan, China, were the principal speakers.

Long before the time appointed, large crowds surged around the entrances to the auditorium, and a few minutes after the doors were opened the building was pronounced as filled. Hundreds were turned away because they did not possess the all-necessary red badge.

Mr. Wright's address was received with wonderful outburst of enthusiasm. He is a young missionary who has traveled 4,000 miles, the first 350 being a weary trek on foot, to tell the amazing story of the "grip of sin on the locality of which he is in charge." He was full to the brim of his message, and his few introductory remarks conveyed the feeling that he was burning with indignation, and would not be content until he had told his audience of his experiences.

Yesterday's proceedings at the Pre-Assembly Congress were of a dignity that inspired to the uttermost. The meetings commenced in the morning with the devotional exercises and a short address conducted by the Rev. Dr. Hanson of Montreal.

Dr. Herridge of Ottawa was the next speaker and Dr. Wilson of Winnipeg followed, and the applause which interrupted the speaker at times when he spoke of the evils which beset the country were of the most tumultuous character.

Prof. Law next spoke upon the Church, and his statements were often greeted with applause. At the afternoon session Dr. Bruce Taylor of Montreal created a delightful atmosphere with his breezy address, and President Falconer was listened to with great respect. Chancellor Burwash of Victoria was publicly acknowledged by Dr. R. P. Mackay and asked to offer a prayer. Canon Plumtre, Canon Dyson Hague, and the Rev. J. H. Arnup were present on the platform.

BRANTFORD, June 3.—The culmination of a series of accidents in connection with the entraining of the Twenty-fifth Dragoons for the Niagara camp, came about at one o'clock yesterday when Mac Keating, of Kalamazoo, Mich., had his head completely severed by falling under a train.

Keating had only joined the dragoons at Paris Saturday evening to take in the camp. He tried to board the train yesterday as it pulled out.

Major Brooks of the Second Dragoons was also the victim of an accident. He was run down by a motor truck and his horse was killed. The rider sustained three broken ribs.

At the T. H. & B. depot George Cazy, a spectator, endeavored to mount one of the horses and was thrown to the pavement, the horse falling on top of him. Cazy was rushed to the hospital and his recovery is doubtful.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE GROWS.

Great Expansion Shown During the Year—President Chosen.

BOSTON, June 3.—Several thousand members of the Christian Science Mother Church attended the annual meeting of the Church, held in Boston yesterday. Frederick Dixon of London, Eng., was elected president of the Church for the ensuing year.

During the last year 102 new churches have been established. Included in this number were churches in Germany, Australia, New Zealand and Porto Rico.

In summing up the report of the Board of Lectureship, an important department of the Church work in Christian Science, it was shown that 850,000 persons had attended lectures given by the members of the board during the last twelve months, 100,000 more than was reported during the previous year.

Auto Hit by Freight Car.

GUELPH, Ont., June 3.—Major E. C. O'Brien of the Army Service Corps, Mrs. O'Brien and J. H. Johnson, proprietor of a local garage, had narrow escape from death when the big touring car in which they were seated was struck by a freight car which was being shunted over the Edinburgh road crossing. They did not see the car until it was almost up to them, and the auto was immediately turned over on its side and pushed along the tracks towards another part of the train several car lengths away. Luckily the engineer saw their plight and put on the brakes before the auto was crushed between the two sections of the train.

Naval Fight In Chateauguay.

MONTREAL, June 3.—The death of James P. Brown, member of Parliament for Chateauguay, throws open a Quebec constituency in which there is likely to be an interesting contest, as his Conservative candidate in the 1911 election, Mr. James Morris, was defeated by a majority of only 40.

The naval aid bill will likely be an important issue in the campaign in Chateauguay.

atmosphere with his breezy address, and President Falconer was listened to with great respect. Chancellor Burwash of Victoria was publicly acknowledged by Dr. R. P. Mackay and asked to offer a prayer. Canon Plumtree, Canon Dyson Hague, and the Rev. J. H. Arnup were present on the platform.

Meat and Flour Dutiable.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Meats and flour will not go on the free list in the Democratic tariff law; if the recommendation of the Senate finance sub-committee in charge of the agricultural schedule is accepted.

This important alteration of the Underwood bill as is passed the House was determined on yesterday by the sub-committee composed of Senators Williams, Shively and Gore. It was decided, in carrying out the determination to perfect the Underwood bill, by equalizing raw materials and their products, that it would be wiser to levy nominal duties on meats and flour products than to put live stock and grain on the free list.

Battleship Damaged.

PORTRUSH, Eng., June 3.—While engaged in manoeuvres off the Isle of Wight yesterday, a flotilla of submarines made a mimic attack on the battleships Irresistible and Prince of Wales of the home fleet. The latter collided with a submerged submarine, wrecking the conning tower and superstructure. The submarine, however, was able to reach the surface and return to Portsmouth. The damage to the battleship consisted of the indentation of a few bottom plates.

MILITANT LEADER WEAK.

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst Still Defies the Government.

LONDON, June 3.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, whose "license" expires on June 9, is recovering from the illness arising from her "hunger strike," which brought about her release on Friday last from Holloway jail. She was, however, too weak yesterday to attend the usual Monday meeting of the Women's Social and Political Union.

In a letter she expressed the hope that she would be able to be present next week at a floral fete at Kensington. The letter breathed continued defiance of the Government. Mrs. Pankhurst declared that her spirit was unbroken, and that if she were arrested again she would resume her protest as before.

Genius.

At his villa in Biarritz Sarasate, the great musician, was once called a genius by a famous critic. But Sarasate frowned and shook his head.

It Reminded Him.

"The dew is falling," she said. "Let us go in before it settles."

"Yes," he answered, but a worried look stole into his face. Little did she dream that with him many dues were falling and that he was utterly unable to settle.—Magazine of Fun.

FACE ISSUE SQUARELY

Liberal Majority in Senate Refer Naval Tribute Bill to People.

Moved by Sir George Ross, seconded by Hon. Hewitt Bostock, that this House is not justified in granting assent to this Bill until it is submitted to the judgment of the country."

This was the Senate's answer to the open and veiled threats of Premier Borden and his press that unless the Senate abandoned all claim to a share in the government of the country and dropped into the puerile position of accepting any measure the government should propose he would take steps to remove or so alter the Senate as to make it a perfectly useless appanage of Parliament.

The motion was presented after prolonged and grave deliberation by the Liberal Senators. It was presented with a brilliant and patriotic speech by that veteran imperialist, Sir George Ross, and was received with unanimous applause by the Liberal Senators. It passed the Senate on Thursday night by a majority of 24, and Premier Borden now finds himself face to face with his pledges to appeal to the people if Parliament refused whatever he might demand as an emergency contribution to England.

It was a memorable scene, and for once the Senate attracted the attention of the whole of Canada to the exclusion of the House of Commons. It was a scene made the more memorable by the powerful stand taken against Premier Borden's policy by the very man whom Mr. Borden in his Toronto speech had designated as "a sound Imperialist."

Sir George Ross, the Liberal leader, also made it clear throughout his speech that the action of the Senate had not been dictated in the slightest degree by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as Mr. Borden had tried to insinuate. In ringing tones he denounced Mr. Borden's remarks as offensive, and declared:

NO DICTATION FROM LAURIER.

"We are not here to suit any premier, leader of the Opposition, or anybody else. We are here to do our own sweet will according to our judgment and good conscience," and then Sir George challenged Mr. Borden to say definitely what his threats meant and not to "shoot darts into the air."

The careful manner in which the Senate had kept its counsels regarding the naval bill was further shown by the fact that Sir George Ross' speech of nearly two hours was listened to with close attention by Sir

Naval Bill $35,000,000 or three times that amount could be voted by Parliament under the Naval Service Act of 1910. It is useless for all purposes of emergency, and would serve no purpose upon the Statute Book if it were placed there to-morrow. Let the Hon. gentleman drop his Emergency Bill and fall back upon the Act for which he is responsible, the Naval Service Act of 1910, and place in the estimates if he will, $10,000,000 or $15,000,000 to carry on the construction of battleships wherever they could be constructed best this year, and take an annual vote until their completion, all of which we are in the habit of doing with larger appropriations than that now proposed."

"When we joined with the other Dominions to fight for the Empire in South Africa we did not send empty uniforms. Uniforms we sent to be sure, but there were 5,847 courageous Canadians inside of them. This Bill calls for money, not men; for models of steel and iron; not for models of courage and daring; it appeals to no man's flesh and blood. Empty as an exploded cartridge, and soulless as its plated sides, it arouses no sympathy, no sentiment, no emotion of joy or glory. Our feelings, our judgment, our sense of duty to our country, all combine to ask for further delay in the hope that even at this late hour we may show to the whole world that the disrupting forces of party warfare have been submerged by the loyalty of a united nation in the naval defence of Canada and the Empire."

WILL HE TRUST THE PEOPLE ?

It is Now for Mr. Borden to Fulfil His Pledges of Last Year.

Shortly after his return from England last year, Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden was given a great banquet at Montreal on September 21st, to celebrate the first anniversary of his election as head of a Conservative Government. It was made an unusually important event. There were 600 guests, with delegations representing every Province of the Dominion, practically the whole centre of the Conservative party being present—the Nationalist wing not being represented as that alliance had not then become predominant. In view of this, Mr. Borden followed the English custom of making important announcements at such semi-state affairs. The Prime Minister gave a guarded account of what had taken place during his visit to England, and what he intended to do.

body else. We are here to do our own sweet will according to our judgment and good conscience," and then Sir George challenged Mr. Borden to say definitely what his threats meant and not to "shoot darts into the air."

The careful manner in which the Senate had kept its counsels regarding the naval bill was further shown by the fact that Sir George Ross' speech of nearly two hours was listened to with close attention by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who attended the Senate as a simple commoner, outside the bar, in order to learn directly what the Senate proposed to do.

What the Liberal leader proposed was exactly what the Conservative leader in the Senate proposed to do with the Laurier Naval Bill of 1910— defer it until the people had been consulted. If that was good doctrine for the Senate in 1910 it must be equally good in 1913.

The position of the Liberals, however, is much stronger to-day. The Laurier naval bill of 1910 was framed on a resolution passed by unanimous Parliament; it was couched within the four walls of the British North America Act, the Canadian Constitution; it had been discussed and approved by the people. The Borden Naval Bill was the child of dissension in the Commons and throughout the country; it had never been passed upon by the people, and it proposed to do something not contemplated by our Constitution. So if Senator Lougheed was right in his motion of 1910 Senator Ross was infinitely more right in moving the same motion now.

SENATOR ROSS DEFINES POSITION

Some Striking Extracts From Speech of Liberal Leader in the Senate.

"We do not assume to be above the Canadian people; the House of Commons is not above the Canadian people. I have seen in my short time four Houses of Commons put out of doors, and it may again happen. The sovereignty of the people is above the House of Commons."

"There is no mandate; there is no emergency; or if there is an emergency we can do without the Bill. Let us wait, and let the people of Canada say whether they believe in a permanent navy or in a contribution."

"In 1909 parliament was united, on a common naval policy; both parties united. In 1910 there was a separation. We stayed by the ship. Somebody went off in a jolly-boat, or a life-boat—I think perhaps in a life-boat—as a result of his alienation, for reasons which I do not question, for I do not know them, this navy Bill came down before us. No such Bill could originate from a united parliament."

"I do not believe in this hiring policy at all. I do not believe we should ask people to fight our battles for us. What did we do in the case of the war in South Africa?"

"I am going to show that under the Laurier Act of 1910 all and much more than he proposes under the Naval Bill can be accomplished. Without that wing not being represented as that alliance had not then become predominant. In view of this, Mr. Borden followed the English custom of making important announcements at such semi-state affairs. The Prime Minister gave a guarded account of what had taken place during his visit to England, and what he intended to do. Quoting a statement made while Leader of the Opposition, so as to reaffirm it as Prime Minister, Mr. Borden said:

"I said it would be our plain duty, that the Government of this country could ascertain if they took proper action for that purpose, to find whether the naval issues were grave. That if we were in power we would find this and get an unvarnished answer and that if the answer to that question by the Government of the Mother Country and the reports of the Admiralty experts were such as to demand immediate action, then we would appeal to Parliament for immediate effective aid. AND IF PARLIAMENT DID NOT GIVE THAT AID THAT I WOULD APPEAL FROM PARLIAMENT TO THE PEOPLE OF CANADA." This statement was received with tremendous cheering by the 600 leading Conservative guests.

Mr. Borden proceeded to say that he regarded the position as so grave that although he had not wished to call Parliament before January 1913, he had decided to call it early in November, and proceeded, "I INTEND SIMPLY TO PLACE OUR CASE BEFORE PARLIAMENT AND THE PEOPLE OF CANADA."

Eight months have passed since then. Mr. Borden has produced his emergency naval Bill. He has jammed it through the House of Commons by the closure, for the first time in Canada's history.

He has been able to bulldoze the House of Commons. He cannot bulldoze the Senate. The Senate has given plain intimation that in view of its responsibility to the people it cannot pass this measure until the people have spoken. Therefore Parliament has refused to adopt the measure providing what Mr. Borden is pleased to call "Immediate effective aid."

Will the Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden, Prime Minister of Canada, now proceed to show his trust in the people, or will he persist in his present course and add his solemn pledge of September 21st, 1912 to the already broken pledges he has to his discredit?

PARTY ORGAN TURNS.

Ottawa Citizen Approves Senate's Demand For Appeal To People.

The Ottawa Citizen, the Government organ at the capital, is one of the newspapers that strongly supports Sir George Ross' demand that the people be consulted before the naval bill is passed. Discussing the Senate's action the Citizen says:

"The solution suggested for final settlements was so much in line with the principles of democracy as to commend itself to the impartial citizen and patriot. This solution was to consult the people, the position taken being that the Senate was not justified in giving its assent to this Bill until it is submitted to the judgment of the country. The principle involved is unimpeachable. Parliament must be subject to the will of the people."

It is therefore evident that in the opinion of this conservative journal Mr. Borden is neither an impartial citizen nor a patriot, and that he fears to subject himself to the will of the people. The great majority of the people of Canada are only awaiting an opportunity to show how correct is the judgment of the Ottawa Citizen in this regard.

PLANNING A ROBBERY.

This London Thief Was Quite Deliberate In His Preparations.

This story of an elaborately prepared crime was told by Sir Robert Anderson when he was connected with Scotland Yard, London. A criminal marked a millionaire as his quarry and rented a bedroom near the railway station from which the rich man took the train for town. Well dressed and well groomed, the criminal took his seat in the same compartment, attracting notice only by his apparent desire

CAISSON WORKERS

Perils and Difficulties That Encompass Their Labors.

THE FEARFUL AIR PRESSURE.

It Causes Exhilaration After the First Painful Sensations Pass Away—The Great Danger Lies in Coming Out of the Lock Into the Open Air.

Laboring on the firm earth, with "all out of doors" to breathe, perspiring and mayhap grumbling at one's hard luck, a person seldom if ever stops to think that men work day after day deep down in the water or the mud, with none but artificial light to guide their movements and only the air that is pumped to them to breathe.

People who work in the open air would have only to labor for a very short time in a diver's suit, a caisson or an air lock, getting a taste of what it is like and how it feels, to be cured whatever of grumbling at their lot and thank their lucky stars that it has been ordained that they work on top of the earth.

The work of a diver, his sensations while under water and his experiences have often been written about, but those of the air lock and the caisson worker have not. While he does not face the danger of fouling pipes and lines, as does the diver, he stays down longer, gets warmer, and his great danger lies in the stagnation of blood and paralysis resulting from the change of atmosphere.

While the man working on the surface of the earth bears up an atmospheric pressure of fifteen pounds to the inch, men in the locks bear a pressure of from fifteen to fifty pounds of compressed air, according to the depth. The heaviest pressure ever worked under was borne by five divers on the Swedish coast—sixty-five pounds. Four of these died a few minutes after coming out.

While, as a general thing, the diver stands not nearly the amount of pressure and seldom stays down more than two hours, the men in the Hudson river tunnel stood a pressure of forty-six pounds and worked in four hour shifts. Some men stayed down twenty hours at a stretch, but did not work all the time, and Superintendent Haskins stayed down once twenty-four hours.

The sensations experienced are peculiar. When a man first steps in there are a tingling in the ears and a pain in the head, and when he talks it is apparently through the nose. This is caused by the pressure, and the remedy is to hold the nose, close the mouth and blow against the ears. This relieves the pain and stops the sensation. When the pressure is all on the worker feels all right and experiences no discomfort. Then there is a sort of exhilaration, and a man does more work in the lock than he could do outside.

The danger lies in coming out of the pressure into the open air. It is then that a man is apt to suffer from stagnation of the blood and paralysis caused by the change in the atmosphere. Besides this, a man may be attacked in the head or stomach with severe pains. Three out of five cases where Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house."

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has helped her."

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to your wonderful medicine."

—Mrs. J. G. JOHNSON, Scottville, Mich., R F D. 3.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for woman's ills known.

ART OF THE JAPANESE.

The Charm of Their Paintings Is In Their Bold, Free Hand Strokes.

To outline briefly the peculiar methods of the Japanese artists, he uses neither oils, canvas, cardboard nor Whatman paper, but employs instead painting silk or absorbent paper with ink applied with a well watered brush, with or without other colors. There is a fixed sequence in the strokes of his painted objects, with an established order in which these objects are introduced into the composition.

The artist rarely outlines. He prefers to paint without defining boundaries. This charming manner is known as bokketsu. He paints upon the matting floor seated on his heels. He makes no tentative strokes. He knows in advance what is needed and paints from a well stored and trained memory. He never retouches. A stroke once made can neither be recalled nor concealed. He paints with the greatest freedom of the arm, with the brush held perpendicularly and with a stroke vigor "like the movements of a dragon," and he invests each stroke with a sentiment corresponding to the very nature of the thing painted. Nor must he hesitate or delay in the act, else the psychological moment would be gone.

ed crime was told by Sir Robert Anderson when he was connected with Scotland Yard, London. A criminal marked a millionaire as his quarry and rented a bedroom near the railway station from which the rich man took the train for town. Well dressed and well groomed, the criminal took his seat in the same compartment, attracting notice only by his apparent desire to remain unnoticed while he dealt with the papers he carried in a stylish hand bag.

One morning after a few such journeys he gave vent to his annoyance at having forgotten his keys. A stranger sitting in the opposite corner politely offered him his bunch in the hope that he would find on it a key to open the bag. But none of them would fit the lock. At the suggestion of the stranger, who, of course, was an accomplice, the millionaire then produced his bunch of keys, and a few seconds sufficed to enable the thief to take a wax impression of the key of the rich man's safe.

A few weeks later the millionaire's safe was rifled, and before the crime was discovered the thief was across the channel with his rich booty.—Liver-

DAINTY COBWEBS.

How Spiders' Fine Spun Threads Compare With Human Hair.

It is hard to realize how small a spider's web really is. A famous mi-croscopist once made some interesting comparisons of a cobweb with human hair.

"I have often compared the size of the thread spun by full grown spiders with a hair of my beard," he says. "I placed the thickest part of the hair before the microscope, and, from the most accurate judgment I could form, more than 100 of the spider's threads placed side by side could not equal the diameter of one such hair. If, then, we suppose such a hair to be of a round form it follows that 10,000 threads spun by the full grown spider, when taken together, will not be equal in substance to the size of a single hair."

To this, if we add that 400 young spiders at the time when they begin to spin their webs are not larger than one full grown one and that each of these minute spiders possesses the same organs as the larger ones, it follows that the exceedingly small threads spun by these little creatures must be still 400 times slenderer, and consequently that 4,000,000 of these minute spiders' threads cannot equal in substance the size of a single hair."

A Playful Prelate.

Dr. Magee, who was for a brief period archbishop of York, was once induced by a friend with whom he was staying to go and hear a certain preacher.
Asked afterward what he thought of the sermon, Dr. Magee answered that he thought it was rather long. "Yes," agreed his host, who was a great admirer of the preacher, "but there was a saint in the pulpit!" "And a martyr in the pew!" was the doctor's prompt return. The same prelate in giving advice to a newly appointed suffragan said, "They will send for you to open churches, cemeteries, schools, vestries and cloakrooms, and to unveil windows and clocks, and it may be that eventually they will want you to open an umbrella!"—London Mail.

comfort when there is a sort of exhilaration, and a man does more work in the lock than he could do outside.

The danger lies in coming out of the pressure into the open air. It is then that a man is apt to suffer from stag-nation of the blood and paralysis caused by the change in the atmosphere.
Besides this, a man may be attacked in the head or stomach with severe pains. Three out of five cases where the head and stomach are attacked result fatally.

Another severe malady resulting from the change is what is called the "bends." This is the air getting in between the flesh and the bone. It is extremely painful and so severe that a quart of whisky administered in half an hour would not intoxicate the patient. The stagnation and paralysis are the worst dangers and do the work quickly. Many men have been keeled over by these causes, and not a few die. Old timers at the business sometimes get caught. The remedy for this paralysis is a quick return to the air lock.

The men as a general thing do not remain a great many years at the business, and a man should never work at it after he is forty years of age.

Cutting a hole and building a tunnel through water is an extremely difficult thing and by many was thought to be impossible. Still it was done in the case of the Hudson river tunnel, and the method is very interesting.

The work on the tunnel had progressed until a body of water was struck. How to tunnel through this hole of water was a puzzling question.
It was done in this way: A so called balloon was constructed by making a netting of wire rope and covering this netting with canvas. The interior of the balloon was then filled with blue clay and salt hay. When filled the balloon, thirty feet in diameter, weighed 140 tons. The hole of water was then located, and with the aid of a huge steam derrick the balloon was dropped into the hole. Then several scow loads of dirt were dumped down on to the balloon and the whole thing left to settle.

At the end of ten days the work of cutting through the balloon was begun. This was a very difficult job. An idea of what hard cutting it was may be gained from the fact that it took two months to dig through the thirty feet.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

are made according to a formula in use nearly a century ago among the Indians, and learned from them by Dr. Morse. Though repeated attempts have been made, by physicians and chemists, it has been found impossible to improve the formula or the pills. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are a household remedy throughout the world for Consumption and all Kidney and Liver troubles. They trained memory. He never retouches.

A stroke once made can neither be recalled nor concealed. He paints with the greatest freedom of the arm, with the brush held perpendicularly and with a stroke vigor "like the movements of a dragon," and he invests each stroke with a sentiment corresponding to the very nature of the thing painted. Nor must he hesitate or delay in the act, else the psychological moment would be gone.

He never sketches casts or living models, and Buddhist influence has always prohibited the nude in art.
In painting robes or other garments there are eighteen different ways of executing the lines thereof. In sketching from nature he interprets it not photographically, but aesthetically, and omits unessential details.
He paints no shadows nor conceals in chiaro oscuro anything he paints.
Finally he seeks for repose or freedom from all care as the ideal condition under which to pursue his art.

Nor can it be insisted upon too strongly that the chief charm of a Japanese painting lies in the inspired strength and character of the brush stroke, which conveys a deep if unsyllabled sentiment, not only corresponding with the emotions of the artist when producing the work, but also enabling us to see with his eyes and feel with his soul. Through the magic of such stroke is reproduced the very nature of the thing represented.

Rejected Engines of War.

Certain engines of war have been rejected by civilized nations in times gone by because they were too destructive and too horrible. England has still in keeping a secret war plan of the tenth Earl of Dundonald which the authorities rejected because, while it was infallible, it was too inhuman to use by man against man.
Even Louis XV. of France had backbone enough to refuse Dupre's terrible invention. If the story of this discovery be true the plan was to create by a secret process a conflagration whose intensity was but increased by water. It would burn town or fleet. Louis refused to have the secret published, and it went down to the grave with Dupre.

The Bad Soldier.

In one of the barrack rooms a soldier, not having much time to dress for guard, had cleaned his boots very well in front, but hardly at all behind. One of his chums, noticing this, said:

"Why don't you clean the backs of your boots, Pat?"

"Oh," said Pat, clapping on his helmet and hurrying out to parade;
"a good soldier never looks behind."

In consequence the adjutant awarded Pat three extra parades, and a few days after his chum, seeing a great difference in his boots, remarked, "I thought a good soldier never looked behind, Pat?"

"No," replied Pat, "but the adjutant does.—London Answers.

The Adder.

A full grown adder may measure two feet in length and about six inches around the thickest part of its body. Its movements are sluggish, and, of course, the idea that it is capable of transferring its head from one extremity to the other every six months is due simply to superstition.
The fact is that the tail of this snake does not terminate in a point, as with ophidians generally, but is stumpy and resembles the head so much that it is difficult for an observer situated at a distance of a few yards to distinguish the one from the other;
hence the story of its being two headed, the fallacy of which no intelligent observer could fail to detect.

From the town of Barrie, in Simcoe County, comes a story of cruelty to animals while under the influence of liquor in which the perpetrator was properly punished. A man from Toronto, James Campbell by name, hired a horse from the keeper of a livery stable at Richmond Hill. The animal was driven hard all day—how hard only the poor beast itself could say—and then left all night under the hotel sheds at Elgin Mills. The horse was found dead in the morning. Magistrate Brunton, of New Market, sentenced the man to three months' imprisonment and the payment of $150 to the owner of the horse. Although the man's plea was drunkenness the Magistrate evidently did not consider it an excuse for letting the man off, which is a step forward in a legislation which is very much needed in this direction. Women and children are not the only sufferers from this evil, for animals of all kinds, and particularly livery horses, come in for their share. It is to be hoped that other Magistrates follow the example of Magistrate T. H. Brunton and sentence to imprisonment as well as fine an offender of this kind. Liverymen should also assist in the general boycott against drink, and refuse to rent their horses to men under the influence of liquor.

GREAT RECEPTION FOR MR. PROUDFOOT

(Special to the Express.)

Goderich, May 31st—"After such fair tactics on the part of the Goderich Liberal members in the Privileges and Election Committee, what could self respecting men do?" asked Mr. N. W. Rowell the Proudfoot demonstration in Proudfoot's constituency at Goderich on Friday night. Mr. Rowell went to say that self respecting men have withdrawn as the Liberal members did, but one man in the audience misunderstood the question and said "they would chuck the Government out". Mr. Rowell caught the point at once and replied quick as a flash "Yes, and that is what the great public will do at the next general election." This statement was greeted with prolonged applause and to the keynote of the meeting.

Visitors were present from all of the district and Liberal members of the Legislature from constituencies over the Province. Mr. Proudfoot gave a warm demonstration, and in turn asked Sir James Whitney a series of scathing questions. J. Dewart, K. C., Mr. Proudfoot's counsel before the committee, scathingly condemned Sir James Whitney and declared that he was implicated in charges as well as Mr. Hanna. (

Canadian National Exhibition Making Special Efforts to Encourage the Small Exhibitor.

The prize list of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, August 23rd to Sept. 8th, is being distributed, and it shows that the Management have given special attention to the agricultural department generally, and to the encouragement of the smaller exhibitor in particular.

In both more money is given to both the beef and dairy classes, and the list has been extended so that in some classes, as many as eight prizes are given. Thus the small breeder, with a good animal is practically sure of recouping, at least a part of the expense of shipping to Toronto.

More money is also given to Horticulture, Floriculture and Poultry. The entire list totals $55,000, and as no prizes are given for Manufactures, every dollar of this goes to the products of the home, the school, the farm, and the garden.

The special attractions this year are featured by three high-class bands—the Irish Guards, and one other from England, and Conway's band from Chicago, while of the spectacle, "The Burning of Rome," it is enough to say that it will be staged by John Henderson, of England, who has put on all the big spectacles of recent years in Britain.

Visitors were present from all of the district and Liberal men from the Legislature from constituents over the Province. Mr. Proudfoot gave a warm demonstration in his turn asked Sir James Whitney a series of scathing questions. Dewart, K. C., Mr. Proudfoot's self before the committee, scat condemned Sir James Whitney declared that he was implicated charges as well as Mr. Hanna. speakers were Hugh Munro, M. Glengarry, J. C. Elliot, M. P. P. Middlesex, and C. M. Roman, M. North Bruce who read the f Thorne letter much to the interest of the crowd.

Mr. Rowell after paying tribute to Proudfoot as a man who had displayed great courage, patience, persistence and a fine public spirit in his course in the Legislature and after criticizing James Whitney severely and finding upon him the responsibility for having the investigation, went further. He said that no one moment supposed that the contribution secured from Mr. was the only contribution secure Government contractors or having relations with the Government. He also charged that the Government secured contributions from hotel liquor licensees. "In the East Middlesex campaign," he said, a "collective subscription or contribution in form was actually taken from liquor license holders in the city of Toronto to assist the Government candidate in East Middlesex, and thousands of dollars, according to information, were sent up to assist the Government candidate. Will a for a moment suggest that those dollars were necessary simply the ordinary and legitimate expenses of the Government candidate in Middlesex? Was the contribution made by the liquor interests in East Middlesex right and the private contributions to be made in contests one of the considerations induced the Government not to accept their proposal to introduce treating legislation during last session?

Mr. Rowell said that the members of the opposition were not only doing wrong doing on the part of the Government, but they proposed were proposing now a constitutional policy in order to prevent, if possible, the reoccurrence of such offences in the future.

SPLENDORS OF SPACE.

Matchless Beauty of the Milky Way as Seen in a Telescope.

The Milky way, or galaxy, is an apparent ring extending entirely around the universe of stars visible in the largest telescope. It is composed of suns in literal millions. They are so remote that, as seen from the earth, they appear to be close to each other, while really they are separated by millions and billions of miles. To the eye the belt of soft light looks like a continuous band of cloth of pearl, but telescopes have the effect of bringing objects nearer. This separates the filmy cloud into many millions of glistening but minute points on the black background of space. At a distance forest trees seem to be close together but as they are approached they separate and stand alone.

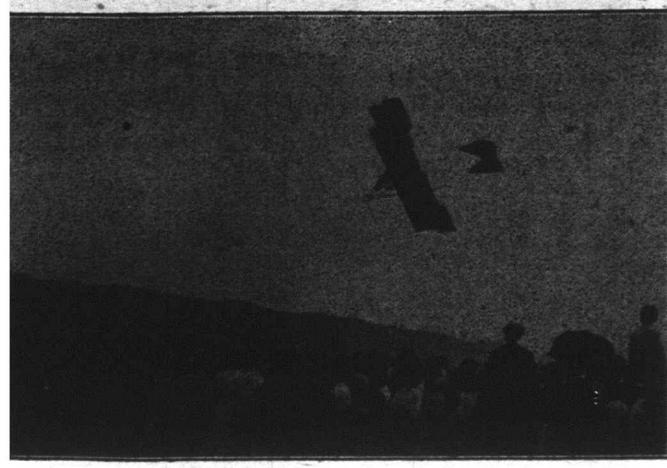

It is next to impossible to describe the matchless beauty of the Milky way as seen in a telescope of great power. Carpet a large room with black velvet. Hang many electric lights in the ceiling. Throw down and scatter all over the black floor a bushel of minute diamonds, rubies, pearls, sapphires, opals, amethysts and other gems. Then turn on the light.

You would have a faint imitation of the supernal glories of the galactic hosts. For the appalling depths of space look black in our great telescopes. In places these suns look by perspective as though they were arranged in piles, heaps and banks or built up into colossal windows, or twisted into spirals, or dashed into wisps and cosmic spray. In some places the concentration is so great and dense that only the most powerful telescopes on earth can magnify enough to bring out details. A few clusters exist that have not so far been resolved into these needle points.

And the height of human happiness is to watch these vast congeries of distant suns in a huge telescope.—George Wharton James in National Magazine.

Knew His Tastes.

Some amusing mistakes are occasionally made by people in the United States, who have occasion to correspond with the various departments of the Canadian public service. The latest came to hand in a letter from a firm of manufacturers of ladies' dresses who wrote to the Minister of Customs, Hon. HARD TO ANSWER

This is the series of exceeding interesting and pertinent questions that William Proudfoot, K.C., M.P.P., asked Sir James Whitney at the Proudfoot demonstration in Goderich, Friday, May 30, 1913.

1. Why did the Committee on Privileges and Elections refuse to permit an investigation into the circumstances surrounding the payment by George C. Taylor of $500.00 to Hon. W. J. Hanna?

2. Was it because Mr. Taylor was asked for a contribution of $1000.00 and that the $500.00 was only the first installment?

4. Did Mr. Taylor (a Conservative in politics) prior to his contract with the Government and having an unadjusted claim ever make a contribution to party funds?

4. Why was the $500.00 not paid over to the Treasurer of the Conservative Association for the Province of Ontario? It is well understood that there is such an individual whose business it is to look after such matters.

5. Why, Sir James, when you ascertained that your chief colleague had accepted money contrary to the rule of the Government, why did you not insist upon its being returned?

6. Did you, Sir James, ascertain from Mr. Hanna that this money was paid to him in cash in his office in the Parliament Buildings where he sits as head of the Department of the Government which has chief control of the morals of the people of the Province.

7. At your interview with Mr. Hanna when he admitted the receipt of the $500.00 did you ask him about the other matters referred to by Mr. Taylor, particularly the question of the coal tenders? If so, what did he say? You did not explain in the House or in giving your evidence. The public is anxious to know.

8. Why is the money still retained? Why was it not confiscated by the Province as money received on another occasion was?

9. You knew in 1911 that this money had been improperly received by your colleague. Why was your first admission of this wrong doing only made when I forced your hand in the Legislature? Was it because you thought that by such an admission the matter would be dropped and the whole odium placed on the shoulders of Mr. Hanna? Why did you not let him explain?

10. Was it under your instructions that your Counsel had the evidence in connection with the coal tenders

BATTERING DOWN THE WALLS OF HELL

But Not the Bible Hell, Says Pastor Russell.

Jesus Promises To Destroy the Bible Hell—Why the Superstitious View of Hell Should Be Battered by All Lovers of Truth—Faith In True God Is Vanishing Because of This Colossal Error.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Kansas City, Mo., June 1. — Pastor Russell here to-day addressed large audiences of Bible Students. We report one of his discourses. In this he declares the hell of the Bible a totally different one from the hell of the Dark Ages, which, he said, still casts a gloom over the masses and hinders a proper appreciation of the Divine character re Love and Justice. He took a combination text: O Sheol (hell), I will be thy destruction. (Hosea 13:14.) "O Hades (hell), where is thy victory?"—I Corinthians 15:55.

"My text," said the Pastor, "teaches that Jesus will destroy the hell of the Bible—the state of death. No one but Jesus can do this. Hence He will do this by delivering all mankind from death by the resurrection. Thus ultimately He will gain His great victory over sin and death, and deliver humanity from their power. No one but Jesus can do this. Hence we must wait for the appointed time—the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom. Meantime, it is ours to batter down the hell of torment which for centuries has troubled God's saints, and turned the hearts of the masses from their Creator."

The Pastor dealt some vigorous blows at the doctrine he condemned. They were not blows of anger nor of sentiment, but of logic and of Scripture. His opponents are comparatively few, he said, and of two classes: Some are good and honest, but ignorant. Others, thoroughly informed, no more believe in a hell of torture than does the Pastor, but dodge the question and give the impression that they believe it, so as to hoodwink the people, and keep them in darkness on subject of most vital importance to human happiness now and throughout eternity.

The masses of Christian ministers are educated. People in general know well that the Bible does not teach a hell of torture—that the words Sheol, Hades, Gehenna and Tartarus do not signify a place of torture, where all except the saintly will eternally suffer. These ministers do not come forth into the open with me to battle the error, presumably because they do not realize, with us, that this terrible blasphemy against the Divine character lies at the bottom of nearly all the godlessness and the growing unbelief in the Divine Word now prevalent. To me it is evident, said the Pastor, that reverence toward God and faith in the Bible cannot be restored until this great Moloch of false teaching be demolished. This explains my zeal in exposing the errors of the past, and

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, May 2.—Wheat declined sharply, chiefly because of rain in Western Kansas and in parts of Oklahoma. The market closed weak at a net loss of 1½c to 1¾c. Latest prices for corn were a shade to ¼c off and oats ½c down to 1-16c gain. In provisions the outcome varied from 2½c lower to an upturn of 7½c.

Liverpool closed, wheat ¼d lower, corn ½d lower. Paris wheat ¼c higher, Antwerp unchanged, Budapest wheat 2¾c higher.

UTICA, N.Y., June 2.—The sales of cheese on the dairy board of trade today consisted of a total of 38 lots of 3800 boxes at 13½c.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, June 2.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, Wcs End Market, receipts of live stock for the week ended May 31, were 1400 cattle, 160 sheep and lambs, 3800 hogs and 140 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale were 1000 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 250 hogs and 400 calves.

The supply of cattle was larger than a week ago, but notwithstanding this fact a steady feeling prevailed in the market and prices show little change. Picked lots of steers brought as high as $7.50 to $7.75 per 100 pounds. The demand from packers was principally for good cattle and full carloads of this class changed hands at $6.75 to $7.25 and mixed carloads of medium sold at $6.75 to $6 per cwt. Common cattle were plentiful and the demand was good for canning.

The market for sheep was lower with good demand for spring lambs, at from $6 to $12 each, as to size. Cholice calves were scarce, but the supply of common was ample.

The tone of the market for hogs remains firm under a good demand from only made when I forced your hand in the Legislature? Was it because you thought that by such an admission the matter would be dropped, and the whole odium placed on the shoulders of Mr. Hanna? Why did you not let him explain?

10. Was it under your instructions that your Counsel had the evidence in connection with the coal tenders and other matters ruled out? Remember you had promised a full investigation and yet your counsel took this course. Why did you permit it? Was it because you and Mr. Hanna were afraid of the evidence which would be given? Your attitude is incapable of any other construction.

11. Having promised a full and open investigation which, for reasons best known to yourself was not permitted, do you think it was either fair or manly on your part or on that of your counsel and followers to abuse me as you did? Is that your conception of British fair play? Do you think I got a fair deal either in the Public Accounts or the Privileges and Elections Committee? You know that I did not. Why didn't you see that I did?

12. Was it agreed in caucus before the Committee on Privileges and Elections as a Committee met, that Mr. Ferguson should be appointed Chairman? Why was he appointed? Was it because of his ability to exclude evidence as shown by his actions in the Public Accounts Committee?

13. Why did you allow the investigation to degenerate into a farce? Was it because you knew there were facts that at all hazards the public must not be allowed to know?

14. Why did you refuse a Royal Commission to investigate the charges? Was it because you had no confidence in the judges or because you had more confidence in being able to control the Committee and see that just such evidence was put in as you desired? In view of the fact that the so-called investigation was blocked and was resolved into a farce, why didn't you instead of accepting the report of the majority of the Committee and passing the vote of censure on me, send the charges even at that late hour, as I requested, to a Royal Commission for investigation? I dared you to do so but you were afraid. The people will ask why you were afraid. The answer is obvious. You had something to conceal and dared not let the searchlight in.

15. I repeat the offer I made in the House. Appoint a Royal Commission of judges of the High Court and of your own choosing. I will present my case before them. If I fail to establish the same I will resign my seat and go back to my constituents for endorsement. If they fail to endorse my actions I will forever retire from public life. I dare you to take this course. If you want to give a fair deal and act honestly and decently no other course is open but from my knowledge of your cowardly tactics I know you won't do so.

tom of nearly all the godlessness and the growing unbelief in the Divine Word now prevalent. To me it is evident, said the Pastor, that reverence toward God and faith in the Bible cannot be restored until this great Moloch of false teaching be demolished. This explains my zeal in exposing the errors of the past, and for the revealment of the truth on the subject of future punishment.

The Pastor did not on this occasion attempt explanations of the three or four parables, which, by mistranslations, misunderstandings and interpolations, have been made to support the God-dishonoring doctrine that eternal torture is the wages of sin, in contradiction of the Bible statement, "The wages of sin is death." He contented himself with reminding his hearers that he had already preached on the parable of "The Rich Man and Lazarus," of "The Sheep and the Goats," and the Lord's statement, "Where their worm dieth not and their fire is not quenched"; and again, that in the Revelation about the devil, the beast and the false prophet being cast into torment. To those who have neither heard nor read his sermons on these subjects, he offered to send his views in printed form, free upon postcard application.

The God of All Grace.

The God of the Bible, said the Pastor, is such an one as every human heart needs and craves. He is a God of sympathy and love, respecting whom it is declared that He looked down from His holy habitation and beheld, and heard the groaning of the prisoners. (Psalm, 102:19, 20.) "Then His own Arm brought salvation." (Isaiah 63:5.) The groaning of the prisoners was not in some far-away furnace, but here on earth—in every home. Our race groans because we are slaves of sin, and sin is paying us the prescribed penalty—death.

Jesus' work at the First Advent was only preparatory. His death was necessary as the corresponding price for the sin of Adam. Only by paying that penalty could He obtain the right to destroy the prison-house of death and deliver the prisoners by a resurrection from the dead. His work was satisfactory. He ascended to the right hand of God, where He awaits the hour when He shall take His great power and reign.

Then the light of the knowledge of God shall fill the earth. All will have fullest opportunity for return to God, and only the willingly disobedient will die the Second Death.

BIG BOAT LAUNCHED.

Noronic Is Biggest Liner Ever Built on Lakes.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., June 3.—The Noronic, the largest passenger and freight steamer ever built on the great lakes, was successfully launched by the Western Drydock & Shipbuilding Co. here yesterday afternoon.

The new vessel, which has been built for the Northern Navigation Co., bears the distinction of being the largest screw-propeller passenger boat on fresh water, and when completed will connect with the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway at Fort William, which probably will not be before the season of 1914.

The mayors of both Port Arthur and Fort William proclaimed yesterday a public holiday, and, despite the rain, an hour before the time of the launching ceremony over 10,000 people were crowded against the ropes which fenced them from the drydock, while many more stood on every high vantage point around.

Engineer Is Indicted.

MONCTON, N.B., June 3.—Probably the first criminal prosecution of an Intercolonial Railway employee for a railway accident in which a life was lost, will be taken up in Bathurst tomorrow, when Alfred Wood will be charged with manslaughter.

Wood was engineer of a fast freight which collided with a local freight at Bathurst some time ago, resulting in the death of two men named Bateman and Hooley.

The relatives of the deceased are bringing the action.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Four armed highwaymen entered the jewelry shop of Mandel Greenhaus on the lower East Side yesterday, held him up at the point of a revolver, beat him senseless when he resisted, looted his two safes of $4,000 in gems, locked him in the shop and escaped.

It is most pleasing to the officers to be able to report that at each meeting the capacity of the hall was taxed to the utmost. There have been fifty additional chairs in our hall throughout this entire season.

It will not be out of order to again express our appreciation of the trouble which these gentlemen have taken to come to Napanee and lecture for us. If I could tell each a few of the complimentary remarks that have been made about their lectures they would feel in part repaid.

THE ADDITION TO THE COLLECTION.

The gifts during the year have been varied in character and most valuable. We are again indebted to Mr. John Stevenson, of Ottawa, for a fine collection of books and manuscripts on Canadian affairs in the last half of the Nineteenth Century. Some of the volumes which were presented are most difficult to obtain and the papers and letters are all originals.

The National Battlefield Commission presented us with a beautiful bronze medal commemorating the tercentenary celebration of the founding of Quebec by Champlain.

Mr. Willet Dollar denoted a set of the Minutes of the County for the years from 1863 to 1908, and a set of the Minutes of the Council of North Fredericksburgh for the years from 1862 to 1906.

Many other citizens have added to the collection. Photographs of old residents and of events, copies of newspapers of this county and district, early Canadian papers, early crown deeds, proceedings of other Historical Societies, reports of various governmental departments of interest to historical students and many early maps have been given to us.

The thanks of the community should be extended to those who have thus added to this collection of histormaterial which is growing so rapidly. The keen interest which is being throughout the entire county in work is producing good results. Many of those who attended the meeting last June expressed surprise at so much original material in archives.

A rough estimate places the number of papers and pamphlets now owned by eighteen thousand.

PUBLICATIONS.

Volume four of our "Papers and odds" was published in June, 1912, contains seven more articles taken from the Casey Scrap Books with a brief introduction by Walter S. Herrington, K.C. The demand for this issue has been about the same as for the preceding volumes and edition of two hundred copies has found ample for all needs.

We expect to publish Volume V. during the summer. The material to print in this new volume has not yet been decided upon as yet. We are going to form some plan which will give our members a better idea of the action and may decide to publish a short list of the papers already on hand.

FINANCES.

The Treasurer's report at first glance is not encouraging—particularly for those who look for a good balance of money on hand. However if you will look carefully you will find that there are many excellent features in it if we have no money. Our membership has increased, the Government continued our grant of one hundred dollars and we were able to spend the money for lectures and more publications. We shall probably be able to build up a surplus until we only the income of which available for general expenses.

A fund of from three to five thousand dollars would make a splendid memorial and would guarantee the permanency to the Society. If we could raise such sum with which to build a permanent fireproof Memorial Historical Library to be named for the generous donor, it would put the Lennox and Addington Historical Society where it should be, as representing the County led by those brave men and women whose memory the world honors as Empire Loyalists.

A HISTORY OF THE COUNTY.

My last Annual Report reference made to the possible publication of History of the County of Lennox and Addington and I stated that work had been commenced on such a book. I pleased to be able to report that publishers are almost ready to put a volume on the market and it is hoped that it will be on sale by June.

One of our Honorary Presidents, Walter S. Herrington, K.C., author and, after spending over a year on it, has produced a history which, without the least question, is superior to any County History yet written in Ontario; and I believe there is only one County History in Dominion of Canada which compares favorably with it.

The book, which is being published by Macmillan Company of Canada, is about 9½ inches long, 6 inches wide and 2 inches thick and will be bound in blue cloth with gold lettering on the back. It will contain about 350 pages of printed matter, about 350 illustrations and an index. The paper used is of the finest quality. The illustrations are varied and the subjects will be found of great interest to all present and past residents of the county.

The cost of such a volume was far more than we anticipated and therefore that there may not be a loss incurred in publishing it the price has been fixed at three dollars net with age extra. Mr. Herrington has his work gratuitously and the money required to finance the publication ticular emphasis to the splendid collection of original material which is being made and told how valuable such papers and records are to the historian.

His introductory remarks dealing with Scandinavia explained how he came to make the trip through the countries he visited and gave some interesting information of a general character of the countries and people of Norway, Sweden and Denmark. He carefully described the Norwegian fjords and told of their importance to one of the chief industries of the inhabitants—fishing.

Starting his views with the entrance to the harbor of Bergen he showed a wonderful series of pictures of that city, the railway route up through the mountains, the lakes and streams with their falls, the beautiful roads, and farmers and their methods of farming and finished with views of Christiania and its principal buildings and places of interest. The view of the Midnight Sun, though familiar, was of particular interest.

With each picture he gave a vivid description and was careful to explain the domestic life and many other interesting points about the people. The perfection of the telephone system of the country, which enables each farmer to have communication with his neighbor at a very low cost and the people to have telephone service in the cities and towns by means of public phones at the street corners where for a very small toll one can easily call anyone he wishes, was also most interesting. The audience was particularly impressed with some of the economic conditions of the country, notably the contentment and honesty of the people.

The lecture was thoroughly appreciated and will be remembered as one of the best of the season's course.

The sixth annual meeting of the Society closed at 10:15 p.m., with "God Save the King."

WAH SING PASSES.

Famous British Columbia Chinaman Goes To Join His Fathers.

The Province of British Columbia, though it is one of the newest settlements on the earth, is mellow with historic places, and her story is replete with fascinating romance and tragedy. Every village has a trail of years crammed with incident. The land is full of wild tales of the grim early days when the people of the province counted themselves in dozens and the natural enemies of the pioneer, the Indian and the wilderness, were very real and near. Into the names of her civic centres, into the rivers and lakes and mountains she has woven a commemoration of her time of travail. To the newcomers, the "Chechakos," the quaint musical names of British Columbia mean nothing except a troubled pronunciation. To the old-timer they are fraught with memories, some happy, even as the Long Sault of the Ottawa, the Lost Channel of the St. Lawrence, or the Plains of Abraham have historic significance to the easterner. The difference, however, lies in the fact that there are many long-bearded, taciturn old-timers still alive who remember intimately all the gold rushes of the early days which first attracted the eyes of the world to this far away land.

TRINIDAD'S ASPHALT LAKE.

One of the World's Hot Spots, Torrid, Desolating and Enervating.

In "The Path of the Conquistadores" Linden Bates, Jr., tells of the famous asphalt lake of Trinidad. He says:

"The straggling village at its edge is an extraordinary spectacle. Not a house but is twisted out of plumb. The land is the source of never ending litigation, because the slowly shifting currents of the pitch bottom in a few years move yards and gardens on to other men's property, distort boundaries into every possible shape, carry landmarks a hundred yards away.

"The abomination of desolation is this lake. In spots a palm killed by the asphalt droops disconsolately. A few tufts of grass have secured a footing in places. But for the rest it is a solid mass of black, dull, evil smelling pitch, with pools of water here and there, in which swim little parboiled fishes. Against any of the hot spots in the world, bar none, this can be backed.

"A wicked looking blacksnake six feet long glides into the bushes near the margin of the lake. It has been sunning itself on the asphalt. No wonder the serpents are supposed to be creatures of the devil. As for ourselves, fifteen minutes' stay takes away every bit of vitality we can summon. Not enough interest is left in life to inquire what the negroes hewing with mattocks at the asphalt receive in wages. They earn the pay, whatever it is.

"The lake is ninety to a hundred acres in extent now, but it is gradually shrinking with the removal of the enormous quantities that have been taken out."

THE CAMPFIRE.

It Is Said to Have Been the Origin of the Smelting Furnace.

The origin of the smelting furnace was traced in a recent lecture to the campfire. If by chance a lump of ore, either of copper carbonate, tinstone or brown iron ore or hematite had been one of the ring of stones surrounding the camp or domestic fire and had accidentally become embedded in its embers, it would be reduced to metal.

The metals which occur—native copper, gold and iron—were the first to be known to man in the localities in which they occurred, but until the art of smelting metals had been invented the discovery and use of the native metals were insufficient to effect to any great extent the old stone age culture.

Among the names which history has graven on the tablets of British Columbia is that of Wah Sing. In this vast new land, where the melting-pot of nations forever seethes and boils, there is nothing extraordinary in the name of a Chinaman linked with the cosmopolitan horde which makes up the motley of peoples herding in this quarter of the globe. The name of Wah Sing for nearly forty years has been allied with the gold activities of the famous Tulameen district. At the age of 110 years he stretched out his withered yellow frame and died in the little log house where he had lived ever since the gold rush of '85. Itinerant Chinese gathered silently from remote parts of the valley. They lighted the little red tapers at head and feet, placed a bottle and two cups on the grave, and then the inscrutable mourners dispersed and left the tiny mound of Wah Sing to level itself on the gigantic slope of the mountain face. The grass has not yet pushed a green blade through the raw soil, for the grave is not old.

"Only a Chinaman," you say. Just so, but the life story of Wah Sing, the little market-gardener of Granite Creek, is filled with the glittering romance of the China Seas; it is clothed in a barbaric splendor peculiar to the East; it echoes to the swift thunder of sea battles. For those lowly-burning candles gutter by the barren of a Chinese viking, they flash the inadequate signal of the death of an Eastern sea-king. Once upon a time this Wah Sing stood upon the rocking deck of his own ship. He flung his sardonic taunt at the crusted scales of the Dragon Throne, took heavy toll of the commerce of the seas and went his fleet way with a treasure-packed hull. Wah Sing was a buccaneer, a Chinese Morgan, with a war-junk of his own and a murderous crew, who bent their evil wills to none but his. What ships he robbed and foundered off the China coast, what men he slew, what desperate ventures he led, he alone knew, and now no one will ever know, for Wah Sing was the last of his pirate crew. If you read the log of H.M.S. Terror of fifty years ago you will learn of the sinking of Wah Sing's junk. It will also tell how the crafty pirate escaped ashore and how his men were taken in irons to Honk Kong and hanged.

So here, in the last west, came Wah Sing to live the balance of a life already old. Through the moulding period of the bad days of the west he pushed his unobtrusive way, a miner, and latterly a market gardener of the Tulameen. Educated far beyond the humble knowledge which is the lot of the ordinary Chinese, Wah Sing was known as "Frenchy," because he spoke that tongue. In fact he had been known to use the language of five peoples—English, French, German, Chinook and Siwash, in addition to his native tongue.

British House to Re-assemble.

bers, it would be reduced to metal.

The metals which occur—native copper, gold and iron—were the first to be known to man in the localities in which they occurred, but until the art of smelting metals had been invented the discovery and use of the native metals were insufficient to effect to any great extent the old stone age culture. Gold, though doubtless the first metal to be known in many localities, owing to its wide distribution in the sands of rivers, was useless for any practical purpose. Copper, however, or an alloy of the metal with tin, antimony, or arsenic, was extracted from ores at a very remote period, and it or its alloy was first to be applied to practical use.

In fact, the first metal to be obtained by primitive man by smelting copper ores depended on their composition, and in the localities where tin did not occur it was a more or less impure copper.—London Standard.

FOR FLETCHER'S
ASTORIA

The Window at the White Cat

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1910, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.

He faced her as if he had known the question must come and was prepared for it.

"I know that he is all right, Margery. He has been—out of town. If it had not been for something unforeseen that—happened within the last few hours he would have been home today."

She drew a long breath of relief.

When they had both gone Hunter sat down on a trunk and drew out a cigar that looked like a bomb.

"The window," I suggested, and he went over to it. When he came back he had a rather peculiar expression.

"In the first place," he began, "we can take it for granted that unless she was crazy or sleepwalking she didn't go out in her night clothes, and there's nothing of hers missing. She wasn't taken in a carriage, provided she was taken at all. There's not a mark of wheels on that drive newer than a week, and besides, you say you heard nothing."

"Nothing," I said positively.

"Then unless she went away in a balloon, where it wouldn't matter what she had on, she is still around the premises. It depends on how badly she was hurt."

"Are you sure it was she who was hurt?" I asked. "That print of a hand—that is not Miss Jane's."

In reply Hunter led the way down the stairs to the place where the stain on the stair rail stood out, ugly and distinct. He put his own heavy hand on the rail just below it.

"Suppose," he said, "suppose you grip something very hard, what happens to your hand?"

"It spreads," I acknowledged, seeing what he meant.

"Now look at that stain. Look at the short fingers. Why, it's a child's hand beside mine. The breadth is from pressure. It might be figured out this way. The fingers, you notice, point down the stairs. In some way, let us say, the burglar, for want of a better name, gets into the house. He used a ladder resting against that window by the chest of drawers."

"Ladder!" I exclaimed.

"Yes, there is a pruning ladder there. Now, then, he comes down these stairs, and he has a definite object. He knows of something valuable in that cubby hole over the mantel in Miss Jane's room. How does he get in? The door into the upper hall is closed and bolted, but the door into the bathroom is open. From there another door leads had come from them. Miss Letitia had at last succumbed to the suspense and had gone to bed, where she lay quietly enough, as is the way with the old, but so mild that she was alarming.

At 5 o'clock Hawes called me up from the office and almost tearfully implored me to come back and attend to my business. When I said it was impossible I could hear him groan. Hawes is of the opinion that by keeping fresh magazines in my waiting room and by persuading me to the extravagance of Turkish rugs he has built up my practice to its present flourishing state. When I left the telephone Hunter was preparing to go back to town and Wardrop was walking up and down the hall. Suddenly Wardrop stopped his uneasy promenade and hailed the detective.

"By George," he exclaimed, "I forgot to show you the closet under the attic stairs!"

CHAPTER VI.

Concerning Margery.

WARDROP showed us the panel in the hall, which slid to one side when he pushed a bolt under the carpet. The blackness of the closet was horrible in its suggestion to me. I stepped back while Hunter struck a match and looked in.

The closet was empty.

"Better not go in," Wardrop said. "It hasn't been used for years and it's black with dust. I found it myself and showed it to Miss Jane. I don't believe Miss Letitia knows it is here."

"It hasn't been used for years!" reflected Hunter. "I suppose it has been some time since you were in here, Mr. Wardrop?"

"Several years," Wardrop replied carelessly. "I used to keep contraband here in my college days, cigarettes and that sort of thing. I haven't been in it since then."

Hunter took his foot off a small object that lay on the floor.

"Here is the fountain pen you lost this morning, Mr. Wardrop," he said quietly.

When Hunter had finally gone at 6 o'clock, summoned to town on urgent business, we were very nearly where we had been before he came. He could only give us theories, and after all, what we wanted was fact—and Miss Jane.

Why had Wardrop lied about so small a matter as his fountain pen? The closet was empty. What object could he have had in saying he had not been in it for years? I found that my belief in his sincerity of the night before was going.

It would have been easy enough for him to rob himself, and, if he had an eye for the theatrical, to work out just some such plot. It was even possible that he had hidden for a few hours in the secret closet the contents of the Russian leather bag. But, whatever Wardrop might or might not be, he gave me little chance to find out, for he left the house before Hunter did that afternoon, and it was later, and under strange circumstances, that I met him again.

Hunter had not told me what was on the paper he had picked out of the basket in Miss Jane's room, and I knew he was as much puzzled as I at the scrap in the little cupboard with eleven twenty-twos on it. It occurred to me that it might mean the twenty-second day of the eleventh month, per-

I found circular tracks, broad and deep, where an automobile had backed and turned. The lane was separated by high hedges of osage orange from the properties on either side, and each house in that neighborhood had a drive of its own, which entered from the main street, circled the house and went out as it came.

There was no reason, or, so far as I could see, no legitimate reason why a car should have stopped there, yet it stopped and for some time. Deeper tracks in the sand at the side of the lane showed that.

I felt that I had made some progress. I had found where the pearls had been hidden after the theft, and this put Bella out of the question. And I had found—or thought I had—the way in which Miss Jane had been taken away from Bellwood.

I came back past the long rear wing of the house which contained, I presumed, the kitchen and the other mysterious regions which only women and architects comprehend. A long porch ran the length of the wing, and as I passed I heard my name called.

"In here in the old laundry," Margery's voice repeated, and I retraced my steps and went up on the porch. At the very end of the wing, dismantled, piled at the sides with firewood and broken furniture, was an old laundry. Its tubs were rusty, its walls mildewed and streaked, and it exhaled the musty odor of empty houses. On the floor in the middle of the room, undeniably dirty and disheveled, sat Margery Fleming.

"I thought you were never coming," she said petulantly. "I have been here alone for an hour."

"I'm sure I never guessed it," I apologized. "I should have been only too glad to come and sit with you."

She was fumbling with her hair, which hung, loosely knotted, over one small ear.

"I hate to look ridiculous," she said sharply, "and I detest being laughed at. I've been crying, and I haven't any handkerchief."

I proffered mine gravely, and she took it.

"Now," she said when she had jabbed the last hairpin into place and tucked my handkerchief into her belt, "if you have been sufficiently amused perhaps you will help me out of here."

She brushed aside her gown, and I saw what had occurred. She was sitting half over a trapdoor in the floor, which had closed on her skirts and held her fast.

"I was sure Robert had not looked carefully in the old wine cellar," she said, "and then I remembered this trapdoor opened into it. It was the only place we hadn't explored thoroughly. I put a ladder down and looked around."

"Couldn't you—er—get out of your garments, and—I could go out and close the door?" I suggested delicately. "You see, you are sitting on the trapdoor and—"

But Margery scouted the suggestion with the proper scorn and demanded a pair of scissors. She cut herself loose with vicious snips, while I paraphrased the old nursery rhyme, "She cut her lips yes, but is i know it. Wh Knox?"

Whereupon I helped Miss Letitia into the room.

"I think I know where Jane is," said, putting down her cane with a jerk. "I don't know why I didn't think about it before. She's gone to get new teeth. She's been talkin' of a month. Not but what her old I would have done well enough."

"She would hardly go in the middle of the night," I returned. "She was very timid woman, wasn't she?"

"She wasn't raised right," Miss Letitia said, with a shake of her head. "She's the baby, and the young always spoiled."

"Have you thought that this might be more than it appears to be?" I feeling my way. She was a very woman. "It—for instance, it might be abduction, kidnaping—for a som."

"Ransom!" Miss Letitia snapped. "Mr. Knox, my father made his money by working hard for it. I have wasted it—not that I know of. If Jane Maitland was fool enough to be abducted she'll stay awhile before pay anything for her. It looks to me as if this detective business was going to be expensive anyhow."

My excuse for dwelling with such attention to detail on the preliminary story, the disappearance of Miss Maitland and the peculiar circumstances surrounding it, will have to find its justification in the events followed it. Miss Jane herself the solution of that mystery solved even more tragic one in which we are about to be involved. I say we because it was borne in on me at that time that the things that concerned Margery Fleming must concern henceforth, whether I willed it or otherwise.

At 9 o'clock that night things remained about the same. The man had sent to investigate the neighborhood and the country just outside the town came to the house above and reported "nothing discovered." Hunter called me by telephone town.

"Can you take the 9:30 up?" he ed.

"Yes; I think so. Is there any new?"

"Not yet. There may be. Take cab at the station and come to the corner of Mulberry street and Park. You'd better dismiss your cab and wait for me."

I sent word upstairs by Bella, who was sitting in the kitchen, her face sodden with grief, and, taking hat and raincoat—it was raining a spring drizzle—I hurried to the station. In twenty-four minutes I was in city and perhaps twelve minutes I saw me at the designated corner my cab driving away and the dropping off the rim of my hat splashing on my shoulders.

I found a sort of refuge by standing under the wooden arch of a gate, it occurred to me that, for all years in the city, this particular neighborhood was altogether strange to me. Two blocks away in any direction would have been in familiar territory again.

Back of me a warehouse lifted seven gloomy stories to the sky. Gate I stood in was evidently the entrance to its yard, and, in fact, an uncomfortable movement of mine then struck the latch and almost

"Yes, there is a pruning ladder there. Now, then, he comes down these stairs, and he has a desolute object. He knows of something valuable in that cubby hole over the mantel in Miss Jane's room. How does he get in? The door into the upper hall is closed and bolted, but the door into the bathroom is open. From there another door leads into the bedroom, and it has no bolt—only a key. That kind of a lock is only a three minute delay or less. Now, then, Miss Maitland was a light sleeper. When she wakened she was too alarmed to scream. She tried to get to the door and was intercepted. Finally she got out the way the intruder got in and ran along the hall. Every door was locked. In a frenzy she ran up the attic stairs and was captured up there. Which bears out Miss Margery's story of the footsteps back and forward.

"He brings her down the stairs again, probably half dragging her. Once she catches hold of the stair rail and holds desperately to it, leaving the stain here."

"But why did he bring her down?" I asked. "Why wouldn't he take what he was after and get away?"

"She probably had to get the key of the iron door. It was hidden, and time was valuable. If there was a scapegrace member of the family, for instance, who knew where the old lady kept money and who needed it badly, who knew all about the house and who—"

"Fleming!" I exclaimed, agast. "Or even our young friend Wardrop," Hunter said quietly. "He has an hour to account for. The trying to get in may have been a blind, and how do you know that what he says was stolen out of his satchel was not what he had just got from the iron box over the mantel in Miss Maitland's room? One-thirty, Miss Margery says, when she heard the noise. One-forty-five when you heard Wardrop at the shutters. I tell you, Knox, it is one of two things, either that woman is dead somewhere in this house or she ran out of the hall door just before you went downstairs, and in that case the Lord only knows where she is. If there is a room anywhere that we have not explored!"

"I am inclined to think there is," I broke in, thinking of Wardrop's face a few minutes before. And just then Wardrop joined us. He closed the door at the foot of the boxed in staircase and came quietly up.

"You spoke about an unused room or a secret closet, Mr. Hunter," he said, without any resentment in his tone. "We have nothing so sensational as that, but the old house is full of queer nooks and crannies, and perhaps in one of them we might find"— He stopped and gulped. Whatever Hunter might think, whatever I might have against Harry Wardrop, I determined then that he had had absolutely nothing to do with little Miss Maitland's strange disappearance.

The first place we explored was a closed and walled in wine cellar long unused and to which access was gained by a small window in the stone foundation of the house. We moved every trunk in the storeroom. The grounds had been gone over inch by inch without affording any clew, and now the three of us faced one another. The day was almost gone, and we were exactly where we started. Hunter had sent men through the town and the adjacent countryside, but no word and under strange circumstances, that I met him again.

Hunter had not told me what was on the paper he had picked out of the basket in Miss Jane's room, and I knew he was as much puzzled as I at the scrap in the little cupboard with eleven twenty-twos on it. It occurred to me that it might mean the twenty-second day of the eleventh month, perhaps something that had happened on some momentous, long buried 22d of November. But this was May, and the finding of two slips bearing the same number was too unusual.

After Hunter left I went back to the closet under the upper stairs and with some difficulty got the panel open again. The space inside, perhaps eight feet high at one end and four at the other, was empty. There was a row of hooks, as if at some time clothing had been hung there, and a flat shelf at one end, gray with dust.

I struck another match and examined the shelf. On its surface were numerous scratchings in the dust layer, but at one end, marked out as if drawn on a blackboard, was a rectangular outline, apparently that of a smallish box and fresh.

My match burned my fingers and I dropped it. The last flash showed me, on the floor of the closet and wedged between two boards, a small white globule. It did not need another match to tell me it was a pearl.

I dug it out carefully and took it to my room. In the daylight there I recognized it as an unstrung pearl of fair size and considerable value. There could hardly be a doubt that I had stumbled on one of the stolen gems. If Wardrop took the pearls, I kept repeating, who took Miss Jane?

I tried to forget the pearls and to fathom the connection between Miss Maitland's disappearance and the absence of her brother-in-law. The scrap of paper, eleven twenty-two, must connect them, but how? A family scandal? Dismissed on the instant. There could be nothing that would touch the virginal remoteness of that little old lady. Insanity? Well, Miss Jane might have had a sudden aberration and wandered away, but that would leave Fleming out, and the paper dragged him in. A common enemy?

I smoked and considered for some time over this. An especially malignant foe might rob or even murder, but it was almost ludicrous to think of his carrying away by force Miss Jane's ninety pounds of austere flesh. The solution, had it not been for the blood stains, might have been a peaceful one, leaving out the pearls, altogether, but later developments showed that the pearls refused to be omitted. To my mind, however, at that time, the issue seemed a double one. I believed that some one, perhaps Harry Wardrop, had stolen the pearls, hidden them in the secret closet, and disposed of them later. I made a note to try to follow up the missing pearls.

Then I clung to the theory that Miss Maitland had been abducted and was being held for ransom. But—and I stuck here—the abductor who would steal an old woman and take her out into the May night without any covering—not even shoes—clad only in her night clothes, would run an almost certain risk of losing his prize by pneumonia. For a second search had shown not an article of wearing apparel missing from the house.

Just before dinner I made a second round of the grounds. About a hundred feet beyond the boundary hedge pair or scissors. She cut herself loose with vicious snips, while I paraphrased the old nursery rhyme, "She cut her petticoats all around about." Then she gathered up her outraged garments and fled precipitately.

She was unusually dignified at dinner. Neither of us cared to eat, and the empty places—Wardrop's and Miss Letitia's; Miss Jane's had not been set—were like skeletons at the board.

It was Margery who, after our pretense of a meal, voiced the suspicion I think we both felt.

"It is a strange time for Harry to go away," she said quietly from the library window.

"He probably has a reason."

"Why don't you say it?" she said suddenly, turning on me. "I know what you think. You believe he only pretended he was robbed!"

"I should be sorry to think anything of the kind," I began. But she did not allow me to finish.

"I saw what you thought," she burst out bitterly. "The detective almost laughed in his face. Oh, you needn't think I don't know. I saw him last night, and the woman too. He brought her right to the gate. You treat me like a child, all of you!"

In sheer amazement I was silent. So a new character had been introduced into the play—a woman, too!

"You were not the only person, Mr. Knox, who could not sleep last night," she went on. "Oh, I know a great many things. I know about the pearls and what you think about them, and I know more than that. I—"

She stopped then. She had said more than she intended to, and all at once her bravado left her, and she looked like a frightened child. I went over to her and took one trembling hand.

"I wish you didn't know all those things," I said.

I had a sort of crazy desire to take her in my arms and comfort her, Wardrop or no Wardrop. But at that moment Miss Letitia's shrill old voice came from the stairway.

"Get out of my way, Hepple," she was saying tartly. "I'm not on my borhood was altogether strange. Two blocks away in any direction would have been in familiar territory again.

Back of me a warehouse lifted seven gloomy stories to the sky. Gate I stood in was evidently the entrance to its yard, and, in fact, uncomfortable movement of mine then struck the latch and almost precipitated me backward by its opening. Beyond was a yard of shadowy wheels and packing. The street lights did not pen there, and with an uneasy feeling, almost anything in this none too orderly neighborhood might be waiting there. I struck a match and looted my watch. It was twenty minutes after 10. Once a man turned the corner, his head down, his long ulster flapping at his legs. Confident that it was Harry I stepped out and touched him on the arm. He wheeled instantly, and light which shone on his face my error.

"Excuse me," I mumbled. "I took my man."

He went on again without speaking only pulling his soft hat down over his face. I looked after him as he turned the next corner, and I had not been mistaken—it was drop.

The next minute Hunter stepped from the same direction, and we met quickly together. I told him the man just ahead had been, and nodded without surprise.

"Did you ever hear of the Cat?" he asked—"little political Never."

"I'm a member of it," he wept rapidly. "It's run by the city or, rather, it runs itself. Be a fellow while you're there and your eyes open. It's a queer job."

The corner we turned found us in a narrow, badly paved street. Broken windows of the warehouses looked down on us, and across the street was an ice factory, with inserted wagons standing along the CHAPTER VII. Too Late.

AT a gate in the fence beyond the warehouse Hunter stopped. It was an ordinary wooden gate and it opened with a latch. Beyond stretched a long row, brick paved alleyway, perhaps three feet wide and lighted by a single lamp. The light was a mere glimmer of a light ahead. Hunter went on regardless of the brick paving, and I stumbled after him. As we advanced I could see that the light was a single electric bulb, hung over a second gate. Hunter fumbled for a key in his pocket. I had time to see that this gate, a Yale lock, was provided with an electric bell button and letter slot cut in it.

Hunter opened the gate and pressed me through it. The gate swung and clicked behind me. After the glow of the passageway the small brick yard seemed brilliant with lights. Wires were strung its length, with many electric lamps. In the center a striped tent stood out in relief. It seemed to be a masquerade. The weather was an easy exertion. From the two story house beyond there came suddenly a piano music and a none too masculine voice. Hunter turned with his foot on the wooden step.

The door at the top of the steps was also Yale locked. We stepped at once into the kitchen, from which I imagined that the house faced on another street and that for obvious reasons only its rear entrance was used. The kitchen was bright and clean. It was littered, however, with half cut loaves of bread, glasses and empty bottles. Over the range a man in his shirt sleeves was giving his whole attention to a slice of ham sizzling on a skillet, and at a table near by a young fellow with his hair cut in a barber's oval over the back of his neck was spreading slices of bread and cheese with mustard.

"How are you, Mr. Mayor?" Hunter said. "This is Mr. Knox, the man who's engineering the Star-Eagle fight."

The man over the range wiped one greasy hand and held it out to me.

I recognized the mayor. He was a big fellow, handsome in a heavy way and "Tommy" to every one who knew him. It seemed I was about to see my city government at play.

Hunter was thoroughly at home. "We take care of ourselves here," he explained. "If you want a sandwich there is cooked ham in the refrigerator and cheese—if our friend at the sink has left any. Get some cigars, will you? They're on a shelf in the pantry. I have my hands full."

I went for the cigars, remembering to keep my eyes open. The pantry was a small room. It contained an icebox stocked with drinkables, ham, eggs and butter. On shelves above were cards, cigars and liquors, and there, too, I saw a box with an indorsement which showed the "honor system" of the Cat club.

"Sign checks and drop here," it read, and I thought about the old adage of honor among thieves and politicians.

When I came out with the cigars Hunter was standing with a group of new arrivals. They included one of the city physicians, the director of public charities and a judge of a local court. The latter, McFeely, a little thin Irishman, knew me and accosted me at once. The mayor was busy over the range and was almost purple with heat and unwonted anxiety.

When the three newcomers went upstairs instead of going into the grill-room I looked at Hunter.

"Is this where the political game is played?" I asked.

"Yes, if the political game is poker," he replied.

"What time do they close up?" I asked. In answer Hunter pointed to a sign over the door. It was a card, neatly printed, and it said, "The White Cat Never Sleeps."

The crowd was good humored. It paid little or no attention to us, and when some one at the piano began to thump a waltz Hunter, under cover of the noise, leaned over to me.

"We traced Fleming herethrough your corner man and the cabby," he said carefully. "I haven't seen him, but it is a moral certainty he is skulking in one of the upstairs rooms. His precious private secretary is here too. I don't know Fleming by sight, and the pictures we have of him were taken a good while ago, when he wore a mustache. spoke. Hunter jumped past me into the room and took in a single glance what I had labored to acquire in three minutes. As Wardrop came in Hunter locked the door behind him and we three stood staring at the prostrate figure over the table.

I watched Wardrop. I have never seen so suddenly abject a picture. Every particle of color left his face and he was limp, unnerved.

"Did you hear the shot?" Hunter asked me. "It has been a matter of minutes since it happened."

"I don't know," I said, bewildered. "I heard a lot of explosions, but I thought it was an automobile out in the street."

Hunter was listening while he examined the room, peering under the table, lifting the blankets that had trailed off the couch on to the floor. Some one outside tried the doorknob and, finding the door locked, shook it slightly.

"Fleming!" he called under his breath. "Fleming!"

We were silent in response to a signal from Hunter, and the steps retreated heavily down the hall. The detective spread the blankets decently over the couch, and the three of us moved the body there. Wardrop was almost collapsing.

"Now," Hunter said quietly, "what do you know about this thing, Mr. Wardrop?"

Wardrop looked dazed.

"He was in a bad way when I left this morning," he said huskily. "There isn't much use now trying to hide anything. God knows I've done all I could. But he has been using cocaine for years, and today he ran out of the stuff. When I got here about half an hour ago he was on the verge of killing himself. I got the revolver from him. He was like a crazy man, and as soon as I dared to leave him I went out to try to find a doctor!"

"To get some cocaine?"

"Yes."

Wardrop shut his lips and refused to reply.

"If Mr. Fleming shot himself," the detective pursued relentlessly, "there would be powder marks around the wound. Then, too, he was in the act of writing a letter. It was a strange impulse, this. You see, he had only written a dozen words."

I glanced at the paper on the table. The letter had no superscription. It began abruptly:

I shall have to leave here. The numbers have followed me. Tonight—

That was all.

"This is not suicide," Hunter said gravely. "It is murder, and I warn you, Mr. Wardrop, to be careful what you say. Will you ask Dr. Gray to come in, Mr. Knox?"

I went across the hall to the room where the noise was loudest. Dr. Gray was opening a can of caviar at a table in the corner and came out in response to a gesture.

"Fleming!" he said, awed, as he looked down at the body. "Fleming, by all that's sacred—and a suicide!"

"How long has he been dead?" Hunter asked.

"Not an hour—probably less than half. It's strange we heard nothing across the hall there."

Hunter took a clean folded handkerchief from his pocket and, opening it, laid it gently over the dead face. The doctor got up from his kneeling posture beside the couch and looked at Hunter inquiringly.

"What about getting him away from here?" he said. "There is sure to be a lot of noise about it, and you remember what happened when Butler killed himself here."

"He was reported as being found dead in the lumber yard," Hunter said dryly. "Well, doctor, this body stays where it is, and I don't give a whoop if the whole city government wants it moved. It won't be. This is murder, not suicide."

The doctor's expression was curious.

"Murder!" he repeated. "Why—who—"

But Hunter had many things to attend to. He broke in ruthlessly:

"See if you can get the house empty, doctor. Just tell them he is dead. The story will get out soon enough."

The window gave me an idea, and I went over and tried to see through the streaming pane. There was no shed or low building outside, but not five yards away the warehouse showed its ugly walls and broken windows.

"Look here, Hunter," I said, "why could he not have been shot from the warehouse?"

"He could have been, but he wasn't," Hunter affirmed, glancing at Wardrop's drooping figure. "Mr. Wardrop, I am going to send for the coroner and then I shall ask you to go with me to the office and tell the chief what you know about this. Knox, will you telephone to the coroner?"

In an incredibly short time the club-house was emptied, and before midnight the coroner arrived and went up to the room. I sat in the deserted room downstairs and tried to think how I was to take the news to Margery.

At 12:30 Wardrop, Hunter and the coroner came downstairs, leaving a detective in charge of the body until morning, when it could be taken home. The coroner had a cab waiting, and he took us at once to Hunter's chief. He had not gone to bed, and we filed into his library.

When he was in local politics before he went to the legislature he practically owned this place, paying for favors with membership tickets. A man could hide here for a year safely. The police never come here, and a man's business is his own."

Wardrop appeared. He ran down the painted wooden stairs and hurried through the room without looking to right or left. The piano kept on and the men at the tables were still engrossed with their glasses and one another. Wardrop was very pale. He bolted into a man at the door and pushed him aside without ceremony.

"You might go up now," Hunter said, rising. "I will see where the young gentleman is making for. Just open the door of the different rooms upstairs, look around for Fleming, and if any one notices you ask if Al Hunter is there. That will let you out." The third door I opened was that of a dingy bathroom. The next, however, was different. The light streamed out through the transom as in the other rooms, but there was no noise from within. With my hand on the door, I hesitated, then I opened it and looked in.

A breath of cool night air from an open window met me. There was no noise, no smoke, no sour odor of stale beer. A table had been drawn to the center of the small room and was littered with papers, pen and ink. At one corner was a tray containing the remnants of a meal, a pillow and a pair of blankets on a couch at one side showed the room had been serving as a bedchamber.

At the table, leaning forward, his head on his arms, was a man. I coughed and, receiving no answer, stepped into the room.

"I beg your pardon," I said, "but I am looking for—"

Then the truth burst on me, overwhelmed me. A thin stream was spreading over the papers on the table, moving slowly, sluggishly, as is the way with blood when the heart pump is stopped. I hurried over and raised the heavy, wobbling, gray head. It was Allan Fleming, and he had been shot through the forehead.

My first impulse was to rouse the house, my second to wait for Hunter. To turn loose that mob of half drunken men in such a place seemed profanation. Fleming had been our key to the Bellwood affair, and he had put himself beyond helping to solve any mystery. I locked the door and stood wondering what to do next. I had seen enough of death to know that the man was beyond aid of any kind.

It was not until I had bolted the door that I discovered the absence of any weapon. Everything that had gone before had pointed to a position so untenable that suicide seemed its natural and inevitable result. With the discovery that there was no revolver on the table or floor the thing was more ominous. I decided at once to call the young city physician in the room across the hall and, with something approximating panic, I threw open the door—to face Harry Wardrop and, behind him, Hunter.

I do not remember that any one for years, and today he ran out of the stuff. When I got here about half an hour ago he was on the verge of killing himself. I got the revolver from him. He was like a crazy man, and as soon as I dared to leave him I went out to try to find a doctor"—

"To get some cocaine?"

"Yes."

"Not because he was already wounded and you were afraid it was fatal?"

"What's the use of lying about it?" said Wardrop wearily. "You won't believe me if I tell the truth, either, but he was dead when I got here. I heard something like the bang of a door as I went upstairs, but the noise was terrific down below, and I couldn't tell. When I went in he was just dropping forward, and"— He hesitated.

"The revolver?" Hunter queried, lynx eyed.

"Was in his hand. He was dead then."

"Where is the revolver?"

"I will turn it over to the coroner."

"You will give it to me," Hunter replied sharply. And after a little fumbling Wardrop produced it from his hip pocket. It was an ordinary thirty-eight. The detective opened it. Two chambers were empty.

"And you waited, say, ten minutes before you called for help, and even then you went outside hunting a doctor. What were you doing in those ten minutes?"

was to take the news to Margery.

At 12:30 Wardrop, Hunter and the coroner came downstairs, leaving a detective in charge of the body until morning, when it could be taken home. The coroner had a cab waiting, and he took us at once to Hunter's chief. He had not gone to bed, and we filed into his library sepulchrally.

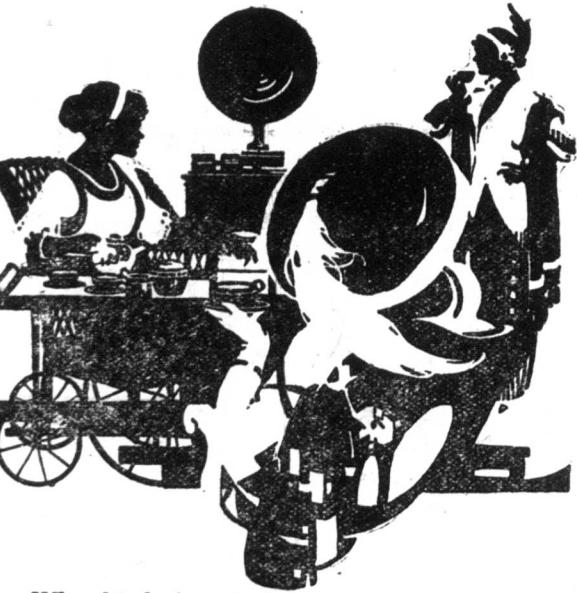

Wardrop told his story. The chief occasionally asked a question. The coroner, who was yawning steadily, left in the middle of Wardrop's story as if in his mind, at least, the guilty man was as good as hanged.

An Appetizing Side Dish.

One cream cheese, a gill of pure cream, a small jar of bar le duc jelly and a little paprika may be made into a charming little "side" appetizer for a chafing dish party. First the cheese and cream are beaten to a froth to form a puffy cake almost filling a soup dish; then a hole dug in its center is filled with bar le duc, and finally the entire surface is sprinkled with paprika. To write about it takes longer than to make this side dish, but it lives long in the memory of those who have eaten of it.

HOME COURSE IN FRUITS AND BERRIES

THE FIRST SEASON WITH THE PEACH ORCHARD.

By MAURICE A. BLAKE of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station.

THE selection of the site for the orchard is one of the first considerations in the planting of a peach orchard, and a very important one, for it may mean success or failure according to the character of the soil, exposure and elevation which is chosen.

Most fruit growers realize the importance of selecting a site which is somewhat elevated above the surrounding land level. A site which is severely exposed to strong prevailing winds, however, should be avoided, as the young trees are likely to be blown over or loosened from the soil during the first season of growth. If one plans to develop extensive orchards he should choose a site that will permit of uniform and economical development and avoid areas with distinct irregularities.

Selection of a Site.

The selection of a site also involves the selection of the soil, and this is of

DESIRABLE FORM OF GROWTH BY PEACH TREE HEADED ABOUT TWO FEET HIGH WHEN SET.

the greatest importance. The peach will succeed on a great variety of soils, but a well drained sandy loam is considered best. The adaptability of the surface soil for peach growing is much modified by the character of the subsoil and underlying strata. Some of the heavier loams and even soils containing some clay may be made to produce fine peaches if the subsoil is porto secure trees free from scale, but this is not as important as the diseases mentioned, as the scale can be controlled by proper spraying, and this operation will be necessary each year, even if stock free from scale is set.

Do not order trees from an agent who represents a firm of whose reliability you are not certain, and it is better in any case to order directly from the nurseryman.

When to Order Trees.

Trees are graded by nurserymen in two ways—by height and by caliper. The height is measured from the point where the tree was budded, and the caliper is the diameter of the trunk three inches "above the bud." The latter is the more accurate and better system of grading.

Ordering the trees is a matter which is often neglected until a short time before the trees are actually needed for planting. This is a serious mistake. One should decide upon the varieties and the number of trees to be planted, and the trees should be ordered not later than February.

If there is no local nursery where good trees can be obtained write to some reliable grower and ask him if he can supply you. You will then receive a reply as to whether the trees desired can be supplied, and if so you can place your order. If you are planning to purchase a considerable number of trees a good method is to order by samples by requesting the nurseryman to ship you samples of the kinds of trees you desire. Always order a few more trees than you actually need. This will permit of discarding any poor or injured ones.

Have your trees shipped to arrive a considerable time in advance of the day or week in which they are to be set and "heel them in." You will then have your trees at hand ready to set when the conditions for planting are best. If one understands "heeling them in" properly, so they will not be damaged during the winter, it is a good practice to purchase the trees in the fall.

As soon as the trees arrive from the nurseryman they should be unpacked to note their condition. If the trees are dry the roots should be placed in water for a time until the bark on the trunk and branches of the trees regains its full, bright appearance. If the soil is in workable condition when the trees arrive they should be taken to the proposed site of the orchard and pruned and heeled in. They will then be near at hand when needed for planting.

Proper Height to "Cut Back."

Two to two and one-half feet above the bud is about the proper height to "cut back" peach trees for planting. Good trees can be formed when cut back to eighteen inches, but anything more severe than this is not to be recommended.

Sometimes the roots of peach trees which have been grown upon sandy soil show an infestation of black peach aphides or plant lice. These are likely to check seriously the growth of the trees where they are planted upon the sandy soils, and it is recommended that the roots of infested trees be dipped in a solution of whale oil soap at the rate of one pound to three to four gallons of water. One of the soluble oils for killing scale would also probably be a safe dipping solution made up at the rate of one part of oil to sixteen or planting gang—two men to set and a boy or man to drop the trees. If the planting is done upon a bright day the roots of the trees should be kept covered with a piece of moist burlap or similar material as they are carried out to be set, and only a few trees should be dropped ahead of the men who are setting. If the weather is dull and rainy at planting time a considerable number of trees may be dropped ahead of the men who are planting, and the man who does the distributing can also assist in setting.

If the land is well furrowed out where the trees are to be planted it will only be necessary to move from two to four shovelfuls of soil in order to make a hole of sufficient width and depth to receive each tree. One man should then hold the tree in place while the other shovels in some of the loose, moist surface soil about the roots.

Most any vegetable crop may be grown between the trees the first summer without damage to the orchard, and it usually proves to be an indirect benefit. The truck crop is likely to receive attention in the form of good cultivation, and this is of much value to the trees. Where the orchard is not planted with some marketable crop, the cultivation is seldom as well done.

Such crops as tomatoes, sweet potatoes, melons, sweet corn and bush lima beans may be grown successfully in the young peach orchard and under average conditions will at least pay the cost of the cultivation of the orchard for that season.

Caution in Summer Pruning.

Unless the young peach trees are upon fertile soil and are making a rapid growth it is best not to practice any summer pruning the first season.

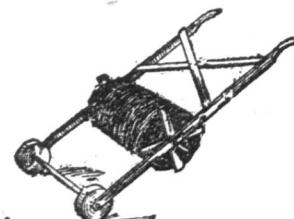

In the past there have been too many orchard failures that could have been prevented, and too many such failures are occurring today. Lack of thorough cultivation is responsible for more partial and complete failures than any other one thing, not even excepting peach yellows, little peach or scale.

The peach orchard should be kept thoroughly cultivated from early spring until midsummer, when a cover crop should be grown. It cannot be left without cultivation for a single season without incurring temporary and permanent injury.

One must spray the trees thoroughly each year before the buds open with a good lime-sulphur mixture to control the scale and leaf curl.

will succeed on a great variety of soils, but a well drained sandy loam is considered best. The adaptability of the surface soil for peach growing is much modified by the character of the subsoil and underlying strata. Some of the heavier loams and even soils containing some clay may be made to produce fine peaches if the subsoil is porous and affords good drainage. The better so called "chestnut soils" are well adapted to peaches, and the trees live longer than upon the sandy soils.

The purchase of trees for peach growing is a troublesome and puzzling one to many fruit growers.

In a general way it makes very little difference where the trees are grown if they are well grown and are free from injurious insects and diseases. Some believe that peach trees grown in the south and set in a locality a considerable distance to the north are likely to start into growth too early in the spring, but this will not be the case, even the first year, if the trees are properly handled. Temperature largely determines the time when the trees will start into growth. The top of a peach tree may be placed in a greenhouse in winter and brought into bloom with the roots frozen solidly outside, or the roots may be kept warm in the greenhouse and the top exposed outside, with the result that the portion of the trunk inside will send out new growths, while the part exposed to low temperature will remain dormant.

One should aim to avoid buying trees which are grown in a locality where any serious disease, such as peach yellows or root gall, is known to be established. It is very desirable also to check carefully the growths of the trees where they are planted upon the sandy soils, and it is recommended that the roots of infested trees be dipped in a solution of whale oil soap at the rate of one pound to three to four gallons of water. One of the soluble oils for killing scale would also probably be a safe dipping solution made up at the rate of one part of oil to sixteen or eighteen parts of water. The writer has used lime-sulphur successfully for this work, but other authorities have reported injury from this material, so, if tried, it should be used with caution.

As early as the soil is in proper condition to work in the spring the site of the orchard should be well plowed and thoroughly harrowed. Make the land as level as conditions permit and avoid leaving any "dead furrows." In other words, prepare the land as thoroughly for peach trees as for a crop of potatoes or one of the truck crops.

The importance of early preparation of the land after it is in workable condition cannot be overemphasized. It remains much more moist, and the trees have much more favorable conditions in which to begin growth. If the land is plowed late it is often dried out, and the trees do not find the most favorable moisture conditions.

This is an important feature and one which will show the results of good or poor judgment during the whole lifetime of the orchard. There are various systems of tree planting, but the most common and the one to be generally recommended for peaches is the setting of the trees in squares.

when putting up a fence. The manner of construction is obvious. The spool of wire can be easily handled by one man with this device.

Economical Hog Trough.

When rough lumber is $18 a thousand, about the price at present, a six foot hog trough made of two inch plank costs about 50 cents for lumber. Labor and nails add 25 cents to the cost. Hogs destroy from one to three such troughs in a year. Feed gets wasted, too, for a new trough is seldom made till the old one is poorer than it ought to be. Three troughs at the above estimate cost $2.25. An iron trough six feet long costs $2.25 and will last a lifetime.—American Agriculturist.

WRONG ROAD.

Motorists Missed the Evidence of Their Previous Trip.

A salesman of ironware, well known in the downtown district, bought a new automobile several weeks ago. He got one of the newest models, and on the first decent day we had been invited a small party of friends to take a spin through the country roads with him. He wanted to show off.

Well, he did show off. He let the car go as fast as it could, and they covered a surprising amount of territory in a couple of hours. On the way back, however, dusk came on rapidly, and, though the speed was slower, the certainty of the proper turning was smaller. And finally the friend who sat with the driver whispered:

"Leslie, we are off the road. We are lost!"

"Nonsense!" growled the owner of the car. "This is the same road we came out on."

"No, it ain't."

"How do you know it ain't?"

"Where's all them dead chickens and dogs we left behind us?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Good Tip.

A Washington man, much given to long foot tours through Virginia, once came upon an unkempt and melancholy looking person stretched under a tree, who, upon the approach of the pedestrian, immediately executed a "hurry touch" for a dime.

Now, the Washington man had a short distance back been talking to a prosperous farmer, who had complained of the difficulty of obtaining labor. Accordingly he said to the hobo as he handed him the coin:

"About half a mile down, my friend, there's a farmer looking for men to help him in his fields."

The melancholy looking person bowed as politely as possible, considering his sitting posture, and replied:

"Thanks. I might er strolled down thst way accidental-like."—Harper's Magazine.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

Something About the Woman Who Apparently Doesn't Work.

THE LAZY STAY AT HOMES.

Society's Latest Diversion These Spring Days In New York Is the Restaurant Dancing Tea—Men and Women Trip the Light Fantastic at 5 o'Clock.

Dear Elsa—I'm going to preach, so you poor, suffering sister, if you're not in the mood for sermonizing, burn this letter or sidetrack it until its power of suggestion will appeal. My text is, "The Woman Who Doesn't Work." She's rare these days, but she's about. It seems, if one listens to general conversation, that all women work, some for a livelihood and others just for work's sake—work as a means of developing their personalities and to enlarge the interests of the workers. That's the slogan. You know, dear, that it's the "thing" to have an important occupation of your own or at least one which you can talk about with importance.

Now, work is a good thing for everybody, but I think there are a few of us who have rather narrow ideas about it. We think our own particular job is the only really important thing in the world and that people who occupy themselves with other matters are more or less certain to be idling.

To come down to cases, I know a family of four sisters—one is employed in an office, one is a teacher, one an art student, and the fourth stays at home. Her name is Margaret, and she occupies the position of "Jack in the middle" in the family.

All the sisters are nice girls and very fond of each other, but the three workers with one accord combine to patronize and pity Margaret, not in an unfriendly way, but quite as a matter of course.

"You see, she does nothing," they say. "It's a pity she has no talents, for the days at home are so dull and long. At least she doesn't have to toil for her bread and butter as the rest of us do."

To be perfectly honest in the matter, I had always thought Margaret rather lazy and often wondered how she could sit idle while her sisters worked. But after spending a day with the family I changed my mind.

Work? That girl worked from sunrise to sunset. She did more in a day than any of her sisters did in a week, and the work was purely unselfish, as she received neither credit nor payment for it. The teaching sister wanted a lot of circulars sent off to pupils, and of course Margaret could address the envelopes—it would give her a nice little occupation. The office girl never had time to attend to her clothes, and it was quite an understood thing that Margaret should darn her stockings, trim her hats and keep her clothes in order. The art student wanted a model, and Margaret must pose, and so on, and so on. At the end of the week

the three sisters had something to work. The least these sisters could do would be to speak well of her, to acknowledge her usefulness and to place her on an equality with their important, busy selves.

If you have a Margaret in your house do not cheat her of the only wage which she wants—your love and thanks. Do not fall into the habit of supposing that stay at home sisters and mothers never need any rest or change. They want it just as much as you do, for they toil at a very hard profession, that of doing the odds and ends which are too dull or two trivial for others to undertake.

Do not snub and patronize the stay at homes more than you can help, for it is quite possible that every day of their lives they accomplish a work which has a value far above that of your own labors. Here endeth the sermon.

From grave to gay is but a step, and, speaking of steps, the very latest fad here in New York this spring is the restaurant dancing tea. You drop in between 5 and 6 in the afternoon ostensibly to drink tea, but what you really do is to sip a very little bit and trip a la one step—polite name for turkey trot, tango, etc.—a great deal to the music of a tinpanny piano, a banjo and a guitar, I said music, but I didn't mean to use the term, for music is not fashionable this season. Just noise is the thing—ragtime bang-bang.

The people who go to these teas? Well, there are all kinds—nice, half nice and the not nice at all varieties. The tea tables are arranged round the wall, and a big space is left in the center of the room for the dancers, and you have no idea how many couples can do a one step in a small space. It really requires only the dimensions of a new five cent piece to trip up on one's tiptoes to one's partner, then trip back again, while introducing en route all the odd, outrageous gyrations one is capable of inventing.

Now, dear, I must hurry away from the desk and get ready to meet Dick at the smartest hotel with a dancing tea room in town. Lots of the Wall street baldheads are dropping in at the tea hour to trip the light fantastic for the good of their too, too solid flesh. Devotedly yours,

MABEL.

New Materials For Pillow Tops.

Moquette velours, new among pillow top fabrics, is a lovely weave of softest coloring in Persian rug designs and, while a bit expensive, is reputed to wear indefinitely. Of equally attractive design and coloring are the squares of silk tapestry or silk damask that come in the various pillow sizes, and somewhat more practical looking are the tops of hand tooled leather in Indian red, Chinese blue and Japanese tea green. A new material of the launderable sort that is ideal for pillow tops and far from costly is an unfadeable madras of lace openwork weave. It comes in lovely shades of green, brown, blue, rose and gold, in two toned effects and in combinations of brown with green or rose and of pale blue with gold or violet.

Linen Economy.

For the woman who has no maid or who has a small apartment and does her own laundry work a great deal of labor may be saved by using paper napkins instead of linen ones when there are no guests present. The laundering of napkins takes quite a little time and care, and one might just as well have that time for a bit

RHEUMATISM KEPT HIM IN BED

Suffered Tortures Until "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

McMILLAN'S CORNER, ONT.,

SEPT. 30TH, 1910

"Your remedy, "Fruit-a-tives" is a perfect panacea for Rheumatism. For years, I suffered distressing pain from Sciatica or Sciatic Rheumatism, being laid up several times a year for days at a time. I went to different doctors who told me there was no use doing anything—it would pass away. They gave me mustard plasters and other remedies that did no good. Plasters took no effect on me—except to blister me and make raw spots. I took many advertised remedies without benefit, but fortunately, about two years ago, I got "Fruit-a-tives" and they cured me.

Since then, I take "Fruit-a-tives" occasionally and keep free of pain. I am satisfied "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism and they will cure anyone who takes them as directed. If this letter would be of value to you, publish it" JOHN B. McDONALD.

Indeed, this letter is of value to us and to the thousands of sufferers from Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago and Neuralgia. It points the way to a certain cure. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 trial size, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Timely Tips For Vacationists May Come In Handy.

After walking in the rain it is a good idea to lay one's boots on their sides in order that air may get to the wettest parts. If boot trees have been left at home the boots should be stuffed with newspaper, which will keep them in shape.

The unaccustomed hardness of the water mars the pleasure of holiday makers in some parts of the country. When rainwater is not obtainable a little borax or ammonia will prove a good softener.

A canvas covered traveling trunk may be waterproofed as follows: Make up a liquor of one pound of yellow soap dissolved in a quart of hot water. Add to this three quarts of boiled oil and a quart of turpentine. Mix well together and apply two coats. When thoroughly dry apply a third coat in which about twice its weight of dark brown oxide or lampblack ground in oil has been well stirred. This may now be coated over once or twice with very hard black japan slightly thinned with turpentine or (more cheaply) with a good paint thinned with best copal varnish and turpentine.

Put a few paper napkins in your bag when traveling. When your hands get dirty or sticky use a clean paper napkin to wipe them. If the railway car window is steamed and you wish to look out wipe it with one of the paper napkins. You will in this way save many ordinary handkerchiefs.

If the necessary black boot polish has been left behind a cut orange dipped in a shovelful of soot from the chimney is a makeshift which can usually be turned to account in the most out of the way places. The carbon from a kettle is just as good for the purpose as chimney soot.

Beekeepers Field Day.

Next to doing a thing yourself, the best way to learn is to see it done. It is one thing to sit in some convention room and hear a man tell you how he manages his bees; it is far better to go with him into the apiary and have him show you. That is what you will have a chance to do at the apiary of Mr. Henry Rooks, Napanee, on Tuesday, June 10th, 1913, at 1.30 o'clock sharp; Mr. Willard Embury, Newburgh, on Wednesday, June 11th, 1913, at 1.30 o'clock sharp; Mr. Fred Ham, Bath, on Thursday, June 12th, 1913, at 10 a.m. Bring baskets; Mr. Peter Teskev, Croydon, on Friday, June 13th, 1913, at 1.30 o'clock sharp. A qualified apiary instructor sent by the Department of Agriculture will show how to examine hive for disease, and will actually put a colony through the treatment for cure. He will also render old combs into commercial beeswax by means of the Sibbald Wax Press. Other manipulations will then be shown, such as finding the queen, removing bees from supers, operating to prevent swarming, etc., etc. Prominent local beekeepers will be asked to take part and assist in the discussion of practical questions. These apiary demonstrations are being held all over Ontario, and it will be well worth your while to attend one. Ladies are especially invited, and all are advised to bring bee veils so they can come right out into the apiary with comfort.

We are pleased to announce that we have been appointed sole representatives in Napanee for the House of Hobberlin, tailors to the Canadian gentleman. This firm we have been informed employs a most skillful and artistic designer to whom they pay the modest sum of $8000 per annum. Their sample outfit is the most elaborate we have ever seen from any house doing a special order business. We KNOW their Cloths are of a high order and the range embraces every line that a good dresser could desire. They absolutely guarantee every garment they turn out to be perfect in fit and workmanship. Money back if not satisfactory, and no grumbling. What more could any man ask. We would be delighted to show their range of samples to any man contemplating the purchase of a new suit. If you order and the garments are not entirely satisfactory to YOU it will cost you nothing whatever but the time you spent in making your selection. We know of no fairer way of doing business.

Samples are now ready for inspection.
